No. 3. Who?
A Henry Ford Suit.
What We Shut Out.
Some Other Toad.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE
(Copyright, 1928.)

GEORGE WASHINGTON was born 196 years ago today. Lying in his vault in Mt. Vernon, he seems close to all of us. It is difficult to realize that he died one year before the last century began.

This country has had two great statesmen, Washington and Lincoln. When will the third appear? What will he do?

Washington established the nation. Lincoln preserved it. Number three, perhaps, will improve it.

THOSE that once owned Lincoln Motor Company stock accuse Henry Ford of deceiving them. The public impression is that the Lincoln company was a failure. Ford took it up to save an old friend from failure, bankruptcy and poverty. And of his own accord Henry Ford paid the debts of the bankrupt concern that he put on its feet.

PROMOTERS of South American investments inform you that the population of Rio De Janeiro has increased nearly a million in eight years. Buenos Aires more than a million in fourteen years. Agricultural population has increased enormously in South America.

ALL that is due to our immigration laws which keep out of the United States the white European populations that we need, the men and women that made this country what it is.

Shutting out such immigration, we build up other nations.

THE corner stone of a court house is opened, and inside, alive, is found a horned toad sealed up in the stone 81 years ago. You are told "science wonders."

That's inaccurate; foolishness wonders. Science knows that it is not the same toad.

SCIENCE also knows that when you take grains of wheat from the body of an Egyptian mummy, plant it and it grows, you are not planting the seed that was buried with the mummy. That seed would not grow.

GREAT BRITAIN suppresses a moving picture, showing how Nurse Edith Cavell was shot as a spy by the Germans. Britain wisely decides that such a picture would only revive and intensify international bitterness.

EDITH CAVELL was guilty under military law. Allied nations executed women for crimes no more serious. But the "moral" circumstances were different. Military stupidity that governed Germany and killed Edith Cavell, governs Germany no longer.

JAPAN thinks nations should arbitrate, even in matters "affecting national independence, vital interests, and national honor."

Big nations will not agree to such arbitration. Japan herself would not abide by such an arrangement.

THAT seems natural, but it would not seem natural if a man said, "I will agree not to commit murder unless my vital interests, independence or honor are affected."

The individual is more nearly civilized than the nation.

CLAUDE HOPKINS, who has written and "placed" many billion dollars in advertising, says the daily newspaper is the best advertising medium. It is, of course, because "repetition is reputation," and the newspaper alone makes daily repetition possible.

"KELLOGG chats with Sweden." Our Secretary of State, over wires and through the ether, talks across the ocean with the Crown Prince of Sweden in Stockholm. And newspapers give it three lines. We digest miracles easily.

The mother, Mrs. Anna Koshiewicz, 49, shown in inset, was saved by her son, Louis, 22, who was burned in making the rescue.

Party Split Seen

PINCHOT DOESN'T CHOOSE

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Former Gov. Gifford Pinchot has declined to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator. This became known today in a letter received from him by James A. Fox, of the legislative body of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, who has been circulating nominating petitions for the former Governor on his own initiative.

By International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 22.—Unless Congressman John M. Morin, of Pittsburgh, receives the Mellon support for district re-election, the Republican organization in this city will become a free lance in the coming U. S. senatorial contest.

This is the gist of an ultimatum delivered today to W. L. Mellon, Republican state chairman, following a conference here between U. S. Senator-Elect William S. Vare and Mayor Harry A. Mackey.

"I conferred with the Mayor and we discussed a state as well as a Philadelphia political program," said Senator Vare following the conference. "The Mayor and I are in complete accord on that program."

Then Mayor Mackey made the following statement:

"We agreed that if Congressman Morin is a candidate for U. S. Senator the Philadelphia organization will be greatly embarrassed, and we would not want to take the responsibility for the outcome."

This is taken in local Republican circles to mean that unless the Mellon interests back the Morin congressional candidacy, Morin will oppose Reed for the senatorship, and the organization in this city will swing to Morin. The latter is a strong political friend of Senator-Elect Vare. He was Vare's Western Pennsylvania campaign manager when Vare ran for the Senate.

DROPS TO HIS DEATH

C. Harry Smith, 54, general manager of Westinghouse Union Battery Company, of Swissvale, fell out of the third floor of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, Fifth avenue and Bigelow boulevard, early today and was killed.

The body of Smith, who had moved to the clubhouse on Monday, was found unclothed, and the torn vines outside his bedroom indicated that he had grasped at them as he lost his balance, possibly while opening the window of the room.

The body was found in a private roadway between the clubhouse building and the annex in Bigelow boulevard. Smith apparently had been dead for several hours when found.

G. D. Shrum, secretary of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, said Mr. Smith had moved to the club on Monday after his wife and two daughters had left their home at 1121 Macon street, Swissvale, for a visit to Florida.

This excerpt is from the official report of city detectives:

"Upon investigation we found lying on the table in Smith's room a book entitled 'The Clock Strikes Two.' The corner of page 273 was turned down, and the last paragraph read as follows:

"'Forty years ago my daughter fell in love and wanted to marry against my will. She tried to escape from a room I'd locked her into and i ntrying fell and was killed. For years the shock of that tragedy darkened my life. She was daily in my thoughts.'"

Mr. Smith was identified with Westinghouse interests for more than 25 years, beginning as a stenographer in Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. He was an authority on cost accounting and prominent in the national councils of business organizations. He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Pittsburgh Athletic Association, Edgewood Country Club, Automobile Club of Pittsburgh and National Association of Cost Accountants.

A member of the Wilmas Club and the National League of Masonic Clubs, Mr. Smith was a thirty-second degree Mason and Shriner.

He was born at Jefferson, Greene county. In 1914 he married Miss L. Virgil Walker, who, with two daughters, Dorothy Le Etta and Marjorie Eileen Smith, survive.

SINCLAIR, BURNS GET JAIL

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Harry F. Sinclair, the multi-millionaire lessor of Teapot Dome, today faced the prospect of spending nine months in jail because of his "contempt" for the judicial processes of Washington.

Already under sentence of three months for contempt of the Senate in refusing to answer questions in the oil investigation, Sinclair had six months more tacked on today for hiring Burns detectives to shadow the jurors during the progress of his trial for conspiracy in the leasing of Teapot Dome from ex-Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall.

And that is not all. On April 2, Sinclair will go on trial again before a jury here, charged with conspiracy. He was to have been tried again January 16, but the illness of his co-defendant, Fall, moved the court to grant a postponement. However, the court announced that if Fall is still unable to appear in April the trial of the oil magnate will proceed anyhow.

Convicted with Sinclair in the latest contempt citation were H. Mason Day, an official of one of his companies, sentenced to four months; William J. Burns, widely known detective, given 15 days, and W. Sherman Burns, the latter's son, fined $1,000.

Bonds permitting the men freedom pending the outcome of the appeal they will take from Justice Frederic L. Siddons' decision were taken today. Sinclair's appeal from the three months' Senate sentence also is pending before the Court of Appeals.

Sinclair received the latest sentence with the same nonchalance that he has displayed at every other reverse in the unprecedented litigation growing out of his lease of the naval oil reserve. He had nothing to say.

The elder Burns, however, was badly shaken up at the prospect of spending 15 days in jail.

"Before God," he said, nervously, "I am as innocent as a child unborn."

The younger Burns made an ineffectual plea to the court for his father.

"If there is any mercy to be meted out in this court," he said

SAVED BY POLICE

The family of Wassil Slavy, saved by police when their home at 31 Greenleaf street, was destroyed by fire early today, resulting in the death of five persons who occupied the third floor of the residence. The Slavy family resided on the first and second floors. They are, front row, left to right, Anna, Mrs. Sopia Slavy and Peter Slavy; rear row, Frank, held by Patrolman R. L. Richman, John and Wassil.

STILL BLAMED FOR FIRE KILLING FIVE

After finding a barrel of mash in the ruins, members of the city homicide squad believe that the fire which caused the death of Konstance Koskiewicz, 50, and his four children when it destroyed their home, 31 Greenleaf street, Duquesne Heights, early today, was caused by explosion of a still.

Detective Frank Dodson questioned Mrs. Anna Kozkiewicz, 49, the mother, in the South Side Police Station. The woman denied that the mash was used to make moonshine whisky, saying that it was used for wine. She admitted that she and her husband had been drinking last night.

The mother and a grown son were the only members of the family that escaped, the son being badly burned

Dope War Lands 15 Addicts in Jail

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Feb. 22.—A crusade against drug addicts has landed 15 alleged victims in the Uniontown jail. Mayor Luther S. Crawford has made arrangements for their treatment at a hospital in Somerset.

One man caught in the clean-up attempted to escape from the jail last night by jumping from a second-floor window, after he had removed the bars with a screw driver. He was stunned by the fall, however, and was caught

MORPHINE FRIEND OR SLY FOE

This is the third of a series of articles by Winifred Black, exposing conditions resulting from wholesale, uncurbed sale of "dope" in the United States.

These articles are being printed in connection with Narcotic Education Week.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

THE STORY OF THE LIVING DEAD—Morphine, the second evil sister in the family of "dope" was discovered in 1806 by a man named Hamlin who was a chemist in a little German village.

WINIFRED BLACK.

It was the first alkaloid in the pure state that was ever used.

It was hailed as a blessing to humanity all through the civilized world. In hospitals, in sick rooms, nurses and doctors everywhere blessed the name of the little German chemist who had found a way out from torture for the sick and afflicted and the road into the land of gentle sleep.

About 30 years later, Alexander Wood, a Scotchman, invented the hypodermic needle. The civilized world chanted the praises of the new friend to mankind—morphine and the morphine needle—and Alexander Wood was acclaimed a gentle friend to those in suffering and pain.

It was some time before the ordinary non-professional man and

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Ida Kantser, a maid in the Park avenue home of Johnson Buckley, a paper broker, reported to police today that she had discovered the theft of $60,000 worth of jewels belonging to her employers when she went to a wall safe in which they were kept to get a pair of spectacles.

Senators Head for Pgh.

By KENNETH CLARK,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The special Senate Coal Committee leaves tonight for a first-hand investigation into charges of brutality and suffering in the Pennsylvania soft coal fields. The inquiry was requested by the United Mine Workers.

It will be the third time in history that a Senate committee has gone into mining camps to survey conditions brought about by a strike. Twice before inquisitorial bodies went into West Virginia, scene of bloody clashes between miners and operators. Never before, however, has the Senate undertaken a general inquiry into the bituminous industry. Extended hearings will be held after the committee returns. The scope will include West Virginia and Ohio in addition to Pennsylvania.

The present inspection will be brief. The committee plans only to obtain a general picture of actual

18 Dance On After 36 Hours

Merrily they glide along. At noon today, after 36 hours of continuous dancing, nine of the original 29 couples still remained on their feet in the marathon dancing contest at Danceland, Fifth avenue. The contest started Monday midnight, and with the exception of a 15-minutes' rest every six hours, the 18 dancers have kept in motion continuously.

The team of Mally and Edwards was the latest to heed the call of aching feet and tired limbs. They signed off at 9:58 o'clock this morning after 34 hours on the floor.

The staff of physicians and nurses has been increased. Dr. W. J. McCarthy is assisting Dr. Daniel E. Sable in examining the contestants every six hours. Four additional nurses have been engaged for the remaining dancers.

Those still dancing at noon were Zugers and Toth; Solick and Downing; McGovern and Voight; Philips and Numan; Kristoff and Hay; Bonach and Jaque; Sayles and Cassinelli; Gabrielli and Sott, and Singer and Clowes.

HEARST PAPER CONVICTS SINCLAIR

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The action of Justice Siddons in sentencing the oil scandal offenders for contempt of court for jury tampering is a direct result of the independent action of the Hearst newspapers in making the startling discovery that Burns detectives had approached jurors hearing the Sinclair-Fall trial.

On November 1, 1927, the Washington Herald and associated Hearst newspapers published what is regarded as the greatest exclusive news beat in years. The article stated that evidence had been unearthed which would compel Justice Siddons, hearing the trial in the District of Columbia Supreme Court, to declare a mistrial and take strenuous action to bring any one guilty of jury tampering, or efforts to do so, to justice.

The article was quite guarded. This was for the reason that the Washington Herald already had submitted affidavits proving that Burns agents working in the interests of Sinclair had actually approached jurors and that a disagreement by the jury was probable.

This evidence was obtained by Don King, of the Herald staff, after

Mine Damp Hampers Rescue

EPPLEY TAKES CONTROL OF WM. PENN AND FT. PITT

ARRIVE FROM EBENSBURG

The United States Bureau of Mines rescue team, which was on practice duty in Ebensburg, made a fast run by automobile yesterday to the Kinloch mine of the Valley Camp Coal Company, Valley Brick Company mine, near Arnold, where 19 men are believed to have met death. The photograph shows the team arriving at Kinloch. Tom White, outside foreman of Kinloch, is directing the men to quarters.

BRICK YARD DEATH PIT

Two men unwittingly walked to their doom yesterday morning and three others narrowly escaped a similar fate through this entry to the Valley Brick Company mine, adjoining Kinloch. The miners entered after the Kinloch explosion and fell victims to deadly black damp which backed up into the brick company pit. The three who escaped owe their lives to a mule which hauled them to the surface after they were overcome.

READY TO FIGHT BLACK DAMP

Twelve mine safety teams rushed from all over the tri-state district, fought valiantly against the deadly black damp for almost 24 hours before hope of rescuing the entombed miners gave out. The squads were rushed to the scene in trains and automobiles and they brought the most up-to-date equipment with them for combatting the dangerous gases which usually in fest a mine after an explosion. The photograph shows one of the crews unloading their equipment at the mouth of the Kinloch mine.

HOW HEARST PAPERS BARED OIL JURY FIX

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Here is how the Hearst newspapers exposed the jury tampering scandal which ended here yesterday in the defendants being sentenced to jail for contempt.

The complete story of the exposé was contained in an affidavit by Donald King, Washington Herald reporter, who secured the first evidence and co-operated with the officials in the prosecution. His affidavit was submitted to the government and resulted in the mistrial and prosecution.

TEXT OF AFFIDAVIT

It follows:

"At about 11:30 p. m. or 12 o'clock (midnight), Friday, October 28, 1927, the telephone in his office rang and affiant took up the receiver; that he heard a male voice on said telephone ask if this was the city editor; that he answered that it was; that the said voice then spoke in substance as follows:

"'Are you people interested in a new lead on the Fall-Sinclair case?'

"Affiant answered to the effect that of course they were; that the voice then said, in substance:

"'Well, they are going to hang the jury.' That affiant asked how he knew that; that the voice answered in substance: 'I heard a man say so;' that affiant asked whom he had heard say so, and that the voice answered that it was one of the jurors; that affiant asked him what juror, and the voice answered, after some hesitation, that the name of the juror in question was Kidwell.

"That affiant then asked the name of the person to whom he was speaking on the telephone; that the speaker, after considerable hesitation, answered that his name was Akers and that he was a conductor on the F street car line of the Washington Railway and Electric Company.

"That, after some difficulty and delay, affiant learned from the said street car company the home address of said Akers and visited him there, that is to say, at 206 Seventh street, Southwest, Washington, D. C., on the morning of Saturday, October 29, 1927.

IDENTIFIES AKERS

"That affiant identified said Akers as the person who had made the said call, and requested him to make an affidavit to the same effect as the statements he had made over the telephone, that Akers refused to do this, but agreed to take affiant to the place where Akers said Kidwell frequented and where Kidwell had made the statements that prompted Akers' telephone call.

"Accordingly on the afternoon of Saturday, October 29, 1927, affiant met said Akers in front of a soft drink establishment at 411 Four and a Half street, Southwest, Washington, D. C., was introduced by said Akers to a Mr. Kidwell, whom Akers called Eddie, and entered said premises, 411 Four and a Half street, Southwest, in company with Akers and Kidwell.

"That in the course of a conversation among Akers, Kidwell and affiant, Akers remarked to Kidwell something to the effect that Kidwell had no right convicting anybody of anything after all he had done himself, that Kidwell laughed at this and said that he never did anything in his life.

'GOOD YES-NO MAN'

"That Akers then remarked that he didn't see how Kidwell had been picked as a juror; that Kidwell either at that time or later in the conversation remarked that he, Kidwell, was a pretty good yes-and-no man; that he would give his answers yes and no, as he wanted to give them, and these smart lawyers could not make him say what he did not want to say.

"That Kidwell further remarked that he was getting his $5 a day for service on said jury, and was not paying a whole lot of attention to what was going on.

"That Kidwell further remarked that there was nothing that he was all right, and that he was a democratic fellow, and that he acted just like anybody else, and that he had so much money that he didn't have to put on airs.

"That in the course of said conversation, Akers remarked to Kidwell that he supposed Kidwell would be riding around in a big car soon, and that Kidwell, in response, stated substantially as follows:

"'Well, if I don't have one as long as this block, I will be very much disappointed;' that Akers stated to Kidwell in the manner of an inquiry that he supposed Kidwell was figuring on getting something out of this, and that Kidwell said in response that Sinclair had plenty of money; that money was nothing to him, and that there was no limit to what he might do if he wanted to.

JURY PLAYS CARDS

"That Kidwell also stated that the members of the jury, of which he was one, had on one occasion had a game of cards and when one of the jurors had 'gone broke,' Kidwell himself had suggested starting a dice game.

"That Kidwell then made the remark, in the conversation herein referred to, at which affiant and Akers were present, that he would get something out of the dice game if he didn't get anything else."

CONVICTS SINCLAIR

an exhaustive investigation. Hearst newspaper officials risked a scoop by competing newspapers in turning these affidavits and all other evidence over to the government prosecutors before using it for publication. Officials also agreed to withhold publication of the evidence until it had been actually placed before the court by government counsel and a mistrial asked for.

This was done the same day.

The evidence was introduced which caused a wave of indignation to sweep over the nation. Officials immediately started a grand jury investigation and every facility of the government was placed at the disposal of the courts.

On the same day the government prosecutors sent to the Hearst newspapers the following appreciation of the public service:

"The Washington Herald and associated Hearst newspapers did a real service by bringing information of this gross irregularity to the government's counsel. It also rendered a real civic service in the dignified manner in which it refrained from publishing the details until they were submitted to the court."

(Signed) "Owen J. Roberts, Atlee Pomerene, Peyton Gordon."

The defendants were immediately placed under arrest. Then began one of the bitterest legal fights in the record of the oil fraud scandal to save them from the consequences.

The grand jury began an investigation and after one month of deliberation returned presentments charging them with conspiracy to defeat justice. Indictments were not drawn up, however, and the foreman of the grand jury went over the head of the district attorney to make his presentment to the chief justice of the District Supreme Court.

The grand jury adjourned without action being taken on this charge and the presentments no longer had legal life. The defendants then were cited for contempt and it was a result of this that the sentences were finally imposed.

During the inquiry witnesses refused to testify, charges of perjury were made against those who had unearthed the scandal as well as those guilty. Every legal subterfuge was resorted to whitewash the whole affair. These efforts became so flagrant that members of Congress bitterly scored the inability of the judiciary to make progress. The prosecution was unrelenting, however, and kept hammering away with evidence supplied by the Hearst newspapers until sentence was pronounced yesterday.

MULE DIES TO SAVE THREE MINERS

HAULED OUT UNCONSCIOUS

"Jenny," faithful old mule at the Valley Brick Company's mine, near Arnold, saved three lives yesterday, but lost her own. G. N. Beck and Louis Venzel, both of Valley Heights, went into the pit early yesterday morning. Bert Black, of the Leechburg road, followed a little later. Within a half hour or so, Thomas Justham and John Beck went in with Jenny and they stumbled across Black's unconscious form. Black damp got him and he was loaded into a mine car by Justham and John Beck. All three were unconscious when "Jenny" reached the surface. G. N. Beck and Venzel died inside. Jenny died a half hour later.

conditions to lay the groundwork for a more detailed and leisurely investigation later. The schedule calls for the committee to return to Washington Sunday.

"BUSINESS ONLY"

Headquarters will be maintained in Pittsburgh and trips will be made each day by automobile to nearby mines and camps.

"We feel we can obtain all the information we need by inspecting conditions in the Pittsburgh district," said Senator Wheeler, (Dem.) of Montana, prosecutor of the committee. "We want to talk to both sides. We don't want any demonstrations or dress parades. Our object is to see conditions as they actually exist."

Wheeler only recently returned from an inspection in the Pittsburgh area.

Approximately 45,000 miners in the Pittsburgh fields have been on strike since last April, according to union officials. About 8,000 families have been evicted from houses owned by companies operating with non-union labor. The union has built wooden barracks containing 5,500 rooms to shelter these people and funds are being supplied for food. An appeal through the American Federation of Labor has raised nearly $300,000 for strike relief.

One of the chief purposes of the investigation is to obtain information on which to base legislation to prevent a recurrence of the perennial labor strike in the coal industry. Proposals ranging all the way from nationalization of the mines to governmental supervision of the industry have been received by the committee.

Senator Gooding (Rep.) of Idaho is chairman of the committee of five members. J. W. Brady, a Senate deputy sergeant-at-arms, has been appointed business manager of the tour.

HELEN KOZKIEWICZ, 15.
MILDRED KOZKIEWICZ, 11.

THE INJURED

LOUIS KOZKIEWICZ, 22.

Mrs. Kozkiewicz was saved by her son, Louis, who was burned seriously when he led his mother to safety through the flames. Louis is in a serious condition in the South Side Hospital. The house was destroyed at a loss estimated at $7,000. The bodies of the five victims were found in the ruins by firemen.

Firemen experienced difficulty in reaching the burning house, which is situated on a mud street, a block and a half above Main street. Two alarms were sounded bringing out apparatus from the West End, Elliott and South Side. Firemen were compelled to lay 200 feet of hose from West Main street and Greenleaf street.

8 SAVED

Wassil and Sophie Salvy and their six children, who occupy the first and second floors of the house, were saved by police. The children are Annie, 16; John, 14; Peter, 11; Frank, 6; Catherine, 3, and Joseph, 1. Michael Bohn, who lives with the Salvy family, aided in rescuing the children.

Salvy and Bohn were unable to gain access to the third floor to the Kozkiewicz apartments because the flames had gained considerable headway before they were discovered. A few pieces of furniture were saved from the Salvy quarters.

Mrs. Kozkiewicz was taken to the West End Police Station and early this morning had not been told that her husband and children had perished. She was at the scene of the fire when it was noticed that the five were missing, but when she became hysterical she was taken to the station house. Later she was told the missing ones were at the home of neighbors.

Lieut. Harry Hatters and Motorcycle Patrolman William Sullivan, of the West End Station, rescued Mr. and Mrs. Salvy and their six children. Bohn aided the police in bringing the children from the house and taking them to the homes of neighbors.

Patrolman John J. Kunkle sent in the first alarm when he saw the flames while walking his beat in West Main street, near Carson street. A second alarm was sent in by firemen immediately upon their arrival. Battalion Chief Saul Klein estimated the damage.

The flames are believed to have originated between the second and third floors and to have gained considerable headway before Louis Kozkiewicz was aroused. He ran about the house arousing other members of the family and was burned about the face and body in aiding his mother to safety. He was rushed to the hospital by a taxicab driver who saw the flames and aroused neighbors.

The homicide squad of city detectives have begun an investigation into the cause of the fire at the request of Capt. Alfred Bassett, of the South Side police district.

EPPLEY TAKES OVER TWO BIG HOTELS

The control of the Fort Pitt and William Penn Hotels yesterday was taken over by Eugene C. Eppley, a western operator of a chain of hotels, for a consideration estimated at $17,000,000. The reorganization of the operation of the two hotels will take place about March 31, subject to the action of the stockholders of the Pittsburgh Hotels Company at their meeting March 16. Mr. Eppley, owner, is president of the Eppley Hotels Company.

EUGENE C. EPPLEY

Mr. Eppley termed the transaction a reorganization arrangement rather than a sale. He said that he planned for many years to enter the hotel business in Pittsburgh and now intends to give Pittsburgh the best of hotel service. A feature of the new management will be a systematic effort to obtain conventions for Pittsburgh, Mr. Eppley said.

Negotiations for the taking over of the local hotels has been under way for several months and the last of several conferences between officials of the Pittsburgh Hotels Company and Mr. Eppley took place yesterday afternoon. The hotels here have been for sale for several years, Grant McCargo, president of the Pittsburgh Hotels Company said yesterday. The Fort Pitt Laundry Company also was included in the deal.

2 Killed in Marine Plane

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Feb. 22. — (AP.) — Second Lieut. John T. Harris, United States Marine Corps, of Greenfield, Mo., and Homer Howell, representative of the United Fruit Company, were killed when an airplane piloted by Harris crashed at Port-de-Paix yesterday.

Details of the crash have not been determined and an official investigation will be made by a board of marine fliers. The aviation field at Port-de-Paix is narrow and with an unfavorable wind it calls for great skill in taking off or landing.

Harris left Port-au-Prince in the morning with Second Lieut. Caleb Bailey, Quantico football star, to make a combination mail and photographic trip to Cape Haitien by way of Port-de-Paix. After landing at Port-de-Paix, Harris took Howell, who formerly was a marine sergeant and captain of the Haitian gendarmerie, up for a photographic flight. Washington Birthday festivities were canceled because of the accident.

8 Court, City Officials Sent Poison in Letters

S-4 REPORT BLAMES SUB COMMANDER

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—A storm of protest and indignation gathered on Capitol Hill today as members of Congress received the inconclusive report of the Naval Board of Inquiry on the sinking of the submarine S-4 in Provincetown harbor two months ago.

Forty lives were lost when the damaged submersible went to the bottom with her full crew, following a collision with the coast guard destroyer Paulding on December 17.

Although the formal report places technical responsibility upon the submarine commander and Lieut. Com. John C. Baylis, commander of the Paulding, supplementary comments by ranking naval authorities place virtually entire blame upon Lieut. Com. R. K. Jones, who went down with his craft.

Congressional circles express indignation at the tendency of the report to pass responsibility from the Navy as a whole to the dead commander of the ill-fated craft.

Dissatisfaction on the part of naval authorities with charges of incompetence and inefficiency on the part of Rear Admiral Frank N. Brumby, director of rescue operations, has resulted in the return of the board's report by Secretary Wilbur with instructions to reconvene "for the purpose of setting forth with completeness the reasons upon which its opinions and recommendations were based."

The board will reopen its inquiry here tomorrow.

Congressional inquiry into the whole question of submarine construction and operation received tremendous impetus from the board's citation of Admiral Brumby, whose record of a quarter century of active service was without blemish. As commander of the control force, in charge of all submarine operations in the Atlantic, he is now in Panama with the scouting fleet. He may be called back before the board.

"Rear Admiral Brumby's testimony before the court," the report said, "showed that he had not the familiarity with the essential details of submarine construction, the knowledge of rescue vessels and of the actual work being carried on by his subordinates necessary to direct intelligently the important questions of which he was in charge."

Although the plans worked out by experts on the scene were both intelligent and diligently executed with the greatest possible expedition, "yet Rear Admiral Brumby failed to contribute that superior and intelligent guidance, force and sound judgment expected from an officer of his length of service, experience and position."

"The court, therefore, recommends that he be detached from the command of the control force."

BELIEVE SENDER INSANE

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Envelopes containing a sufficient quantity of poison to cause death have been received by eight city and court officials in a resumption of similar attacks made last October.

The poison, wrapped in plain white papers and in envelopes addressed in a minute, childish hand, was mailed to Chief Magistrate William McAdoo and his secretary, two other city magistrates, a municipal court judge, the chief city clerk and two of his assistants.

The poison was in sufficient quantity to cause death, a chemist reported, but would not prove harmful on merely external contact.

The missives received last October were wrapped in yellow sheets of paper which contained the warning, "We mean to kill. We are not crazy," and were signed "Feddern and his Gang."

Warner Feddern, a commercial artist, was arrested at that time, but later released. He said he thought the missives might have been sent by some of his friends as a practical joke. The writings on the recently received envelopes were similar to the others, the recipients said.

FLIVVER PLANE HANGS UP NEW RECORD

TITUSVILLE, Fla., Feb. 21.—(AP.)—Harry Brooks, pilot, and his diminutive flivver plane, without advance warning, today had made this city the terminus of a record-breaking flight for small, economical aircraft.

Although his projected route, which led from the Ford airport in Detroit to Miami, was not completed, when Brooks landed his tiny ship here last night at 8 o'clock he had covered more than 900 miles of airline distance in slightly less than 13 hours.

The previous non-stop record for planes of 40 horsepower or less was 871 miles, set by Max Knipping, French aviator, in a flight from Le Bourget field, near Paris, to Konigsberg, Germany, last year.

Brooks' descent on Titusville was unexpected, and consequently no formal reception was accorded him by the startled population.

Before retiring, exhausted from his long aerial jaunt, Brooks explained that he had been forced down thus some 200 miles short of his goal because the 52 gallons of gasoline with which he left the Michigan City yesterday morning had been consumed.

WOMAN WEDS JUDGE IN CRAFTON

Mrs. Fichle F. Phillips, 50, of 65 Haldane street, Crafton, will return to her former home at Medina, O., today, as the wife of Judge Fremont O. Phillips, 51, of the Medina county Probate Court, to whom she was married yesterday by the Rev. Dr. W. J. Dempster of Crafton. The two are childhood friends.

Both the husband and wife were born in Medina county and both married, the woman going with her husband to Alberta, Canada, where she resided until last May, a few months after the death of her husband. She then moved to Crafton. Judge Phillips has lived in Medina all his life and has served on the bench about 30 years. His first wife died five years ago.

The judge visited Crafton yesterday and after a quiet wedding a dinner was held in the home of the bride. A daughter of the bride, Mrs. Violet Fraser and her husband, William Fraser, and a friend, Kenneth Cox, of Alberta, Canada, were present.

Will Hunting for South Dakota Governor

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Feb. 22.—I am here in South Dakota. Coolidge found it in the summer time, but I guess I am about the only one who ever came here in the winter. I am looking for that Democratic governor of theirs who made such a big hit at the Jackson Day dinner in Washington. He is the fellow that said they had a big game preserve up here and they just built a high fence around it and turned Calvin in there and gathered him in and shipped him back to Washington in the fall. I am going to bring that old boy out of these hills and run him for something.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

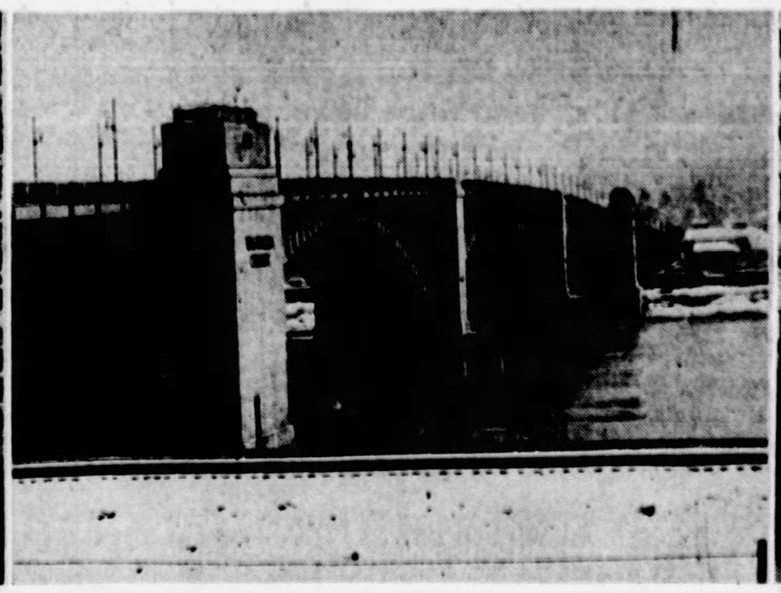
WASHINGTON'S MILL -:- HISTORIC LANDMARK -:- TO BE RESTORED

OLD WATER WHEEL TO TURN AGAIN

The 196th anniversary of George Washington's birth finds Western Pennsylvania about to restore another Washington landmark. This historic grist mill, erected 160 years ago, for George Washington, on his Youghiogheny River farm near the present town of Perryopolis, is to be put in operation by patriotic residents of Fayette County. The mill turned out flour for soldiers in the Revolutionary War and has been idle only during the last 10 years. Millstones and machinery are in good repair.



WHERE WASHINGTON GOT ICY DIP

This magnificent bridge, spanning the Allegheny River between Pittsburgh and Millvale, marks the spot were a rude raft bearing Colonel Washington and Christopher Gist capsized December 29, 1758, and both were hurled into the water amid tumbling cakes of floating ice. They escaped by swimming to Wainwright's Island, near the north bank of the stream. "Washington Crossing" Bridge, commemorating the incident, is one of the finest memorials to Washington in the country.

BRADDOCK'S BATTLEFIELD TODAY

At General Braddock's side, Colonel Washington received four bullets through his coat in the memorable defeat July 9, 1755. If Washington were to return to the scene of that battle today he would see a bustling industrial city rising above the forest-covered plain where British redcoats and American provincials were slaughtered by the French and Indians. This is Braddock avenue, on site where the British advance guard gave way.

MOTORMAN ILL, CARS HALT

Street car traffic was delayed almost half an hour in Diamond street at Wood street last night when Bernard Stevenson, 44, of 124 Allison street, a street car motorman, became ill while operating a trolley car. He was taken to the Allegheny General Hospital where it was said he was suffering from low blood pressure. After receiving first aid he went home.

WASHINGTON MILL TO BE RESTORED

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 22. — George Washington's grist mill, erected 160 years ago on his land near the present town of Perryopolis, will be restored to its original appearance by patriotic citizens of Fayette county under the leadership of the Ft. Necessity Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution.

The old water wheel that furnished the power in producing flour for Western Pennsylvania soldiers in the Revolutionary War will resume its work next summer, it has been announced, and in its operation the picturesque surroundings of the historic mill will be preserved.

Dr. Edgar Husted, president, and James Whaley, secretary, of the Fort Necessity chapter, with McClelland Leonard, collector of historical objects, with a large body of men and women in various patriotic organizations, are working upon the project. The mill dam on Washington's Run will be rebuilt, the mill race will be cleared of underbrush and the machinery, damaged when the structure was struck by lightning several years ago, will be repaired. The place will be marked by the Pennsylvania Historical Commission.

The mill was built under Washington's direction by Valentine Crawford, a brother of Col. William Crawford, frontier hero. The foundation is of cut stone and a two-story frame superstructure of heavy oak. The original burrs are intact and the mill was operated until 10 years ago by Oliver P. Smith, present owner of the property.

FIND STUDENT, GONE MONTH, IN PHILA.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Thomas Braun Moltrup, 20, a sophomore at Allegheny College, who was reported to have disappeared late in January while on a brief vacation from school, has been located in Philadelphia, it was stated at the home of his father, J. T. Moltrup, here last night. The information regarding the boy's whereabouts was obtained from friends, who were said to have heard from the youth.

It was said that while the family had not been in communication with the boy, it was understood that he was visiting relatives in the eastern city. It also was said that he would likely return to Beaver Falls later.

Following the report, last week, that young Moltrup was missing, search for him was made in a number of cities, including Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

No reason has been advanced as to why he failed to return to school, where he was said to have been a popular and successful student.

The Greatest Automobile Value of the Year bar none!

Millions Have Seen It • • • Thousands Have Placed Their Orders

THE NEW MARMON

now $1395

• • • It's a Straight-Eight!

Prompt Action Will Insure Early Spring Delivery

EVEN with its present great production, Marmon cannot possibly hope to meet the demand for this new straight-eight at the price of a six.

We can now insure prompt delivery on a wide variety of models and colors. This condition may not exist thirty days from now, and we are now in far better position than we will be later to handle the car you have to trade in. We therefore urge prompt action if you would avail yourself of what is unmistakably the greatest automobile value of the year.

Remember—it's a straight-eight—the one type of motive power which cannot be obsoleted this year, next year or two years from now.

Marmon quality through and through—not a small car scaled down to meet a price—but a full-sized, five-passenger automobile—tested for a whole year prior to introduction to the public—and now produced in enormous volume in one of the industry's most efficient plants.

If you are going to spend anywhere from $1000 to $1700, this is certainly your next logical move.

It has the lines, the colors and fitments of 1928 and will give your family that feeling of superiority which comes from association with good things.

Smooth, zippy power—70 miles an hour—four-wheel brakes—wonderfully easy riding, with the most modern type rubber-insulated chassis—a car that goes places, does things and stays put.

You might just as well be inside one of these cars as to see them disappearing down the road in front of you. Come in today and ask to see the New "68."

DYERS CHARGE SABOTAGE IN SUIT HERE

Warfare among Pittsburgh cleaners and dyers, now in its second year, with intermittent outbursts of charges and counter charges and embracing a range of crime from sabotage to arson, has reached the civil court.

William Steinberg, Harry Friedman and Isadore Rosenfeld, co-partners and doing business as the Liberty Cleaners and Dyers, Thirty-eighth street and Liberty avenue, yesterday entered suit in Common Pleas Court asking $250,000 from more than a dozen of their business competitors.

It is asserted by the plaintiffs that on April 1, 1927, and various times thereafter the defendants "unlawfully and maliciously confederated and conspired against the Liberty Dyers and Cleaners by tampering with and taking away their employes, by ruining garments entrusted to the plaintiffs, and by circulating false rumors as to their solvency." As a climax to all the charges enumerated, it is declared that the defendants conspired to plant deadly chemicals in the Liberty plant, causing explosions and fires.

The Wholesale Cleaners' and Dyers' Association of Western Pennsylvania, a corporation, heads the list of plaintiffs. The others are Consolidated Cleaning Shop, Duquesne Dye Works, S. Hahn, individually and doing business as the Hahn Cleaning Company; J. Cahn, doing business as the Union Dye Works; B. Cohen, doing business as the McKeesport Cleaning and Dyeing Company; B. Diamond, Lippman Elbaum and Joseph Gerson, co-partners and doing business as the Paulson Cleaning and Dyeing Company; Joseph Leibowitz, doing business as the Sanitary Cleaners; A. J. Roth, doing business as the Shadyside Cleaners and Dyers; Irving Guskey; M. T. Levine, Sam Levine and M. Levine, co-partners, doing business as the Washington Cleaners and Dyers; Jacob Levine and Morris Greenblatt, co-partners, doing business as the Famous Cleaning and Dyeing Company, and P. J. Haller, Louis Cohen, Nathan Roth, Jack Diamond and B. Cohen, in a criminal action based on the same allegations, were convicted of conspiracy and their motion for a new trial is pending in Criminal Court. The case was argued last week.

A second suit against the same defendants was entered by Morris Mallinger, Nathan Joseph and Frank Mayers, co-partners doing business as the Dollar Cleaning Company. They also ask $250,000 damages.

The plaintiffs are represented by Attorneys Rody P. Marshall and Harry Ravick.

PASS MOTHERS' BILL

LAUD HEARST FOR HIS HELP

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Unanimous passage by the House of the Gold Star Mothers' bill, to provide trips to the graves of American boys in France by their mothers, was regarded yesterday as a graceful and fitting acknowledgement of an obligation which the government owes to those who made the Supreme Sacrifice in the World War.

The bill will be pushed to passage in the Senate and prospects of early enactment are favorable.

The author of the bill in the House was Representative Thomas S. Butler of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee and a member of the House for 32 years. He brought the idea with him from Chester, Pa., when Congress was about to begin its session and the suggestion met with such favorable and united approval that he lost no time in putting it into the form of a bill. It was unanimously approved by the House Committee on Military Affairs and passed without a single dissenting vote.

Representative Butler yesterday praised the Hearst newspapers for their support of the bill and explained its purpose in a letter addressed to William Randolph Hearst and made public at his office yesterday. It follows:

TEXT OF LETTER

Washington, February 21, 1928.
Mr. William Randolph Hearst,
San Simeon, California.

"The House of Representatives without demonstration, remonstrance or discussion unanimously passed the measure which had been reported by its Committee on Military Affairs, authorizing the President to invite as guests of the government the mothers and unmarried widows of the young men buried in France, American soldiers of the late war, to go to France for the purpose of seeing the places where their sons and husbands are buried.

"These women may thus have in their minds, not only the beauty of the place where the young men are left, but they may learn that the American people are never ungrateful to those who perform such immeasurable assistance to their government.

"The gratification of at least 200 members of the House was manifested everywhere. It was unnecessary to make any explanation of this bill. Every member of the House knew what its purpose was and manifested a feeling of respect for a class of American citizens never before seen in the recollection of the oldest member of Congress.

"It has been recognized by many members of Congress that the newspapers operated by you indorsed this movement when it was initiated last summer and that you have from time to time advocated its prompt passage, so that even and square justice might be done these Gold Star Women to whom our nation is so greatly indebted.

EXPRESS GRATITUDE

"It was appreciated by members who voted for this bill that this nation, 10 years after the World War, when a new generation was beginning to grow, was still grateful and that it has no other way of showing it, except through a measure of this kind.

"No question was asked as to its probable cost and no member of Congress, nor committee of Congress, has ever made any effort to ascertain the cost.

"The feeling in the House when they voted for this bill was that they were showing to the world America's spirit and that while all of the nations well know that America can build battleships and can enlist millions in marching armies, this nation has a soul and abhors war.

"By the appearance of these three to five thousand Gold Star women in the battle cemeteries of France, we proposed to show the world what waste and sorrow war will bring.

"These women are to be taken over in the most comfortable way possible, with American Red Cross nurses as escorts. When they reach France they will be joined by women of the Red Cross of France.

"They will be taken care of with loving hands and with as much reverence and dignity as though each of them owned thousands of acres of land in the most popular city of America."

BANDITS HOLD UP DRUG STORE, GET DRUGS, CASH

Narcotics valued at $65 and $20 in cash were stolen by two Negroes who late last night held up A. A. Rosen in his drug store at 2217 Bedford avenue. Police of the Center Avenue Station were given descriptions of the fugitives.

TAKEN AT MAIN, WOMAN FINED

Believed to be the first woman arrested for conducting a cock fight, Mrs. Ann Murphy, proprietress of the Marblegate Inn, Leechburg road, was fined $20 and costs yesterday by Justice of the Peace John Popp, Jr., of Castle Shannon. Agents of the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society, who preferred the charges against the woman, said that when dance business at the roadhouse became dull, the woman conducted the cock fight. Five men arrested when a raid was made on the place, were fined $10 and costs each.

EAST END GIRL ROBBED

While Miss Margaret Koller of 6315 Fifth avenue, was walking in Kentucky avenue at Denniston street late last night an unidentified man seized her purse and fled. The purse contained $3.50 and a wrist watch. A description of the footpad was given police at the Squirrel Hill Station.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.

U.S. Senator from New York

Do Something Different to Avoid Tiresome Monotony

SOMEWHERE in a book I read about a character whose pet saying was, "Rest in action." He didn't believe in loafing or sitting around. This man insisted that you can rest best by being active. The other day I read about a man who was so lazy he stayed in bed 20 years. He never would leave it till they took him to the poorhouse, where he could get no food except at the table.

DR. COPELAND

Mark Twain would stay in bed for days at a time. He smoked, read and wrote in bed. He received callers in his bedroom.

I am convinced that oversleeping is almost or quite as bad as undersleeping. It is far better to get up an hour or so earlier than usual in the morning, if that is the only time you can get out-of-doors for a brisk walk.

There is a wise old saying that, "A change of work is rest." Whatever is different from the thing you do habitually is restful.

I believe it is true that there is rest in action. If you have been sitting at your desk for several hours, get up and walk about the office. It will rest you.

I am much interested in watching my colleagues in the Senate. A few of them sit at their desks all through the session. Most of them walk about a lot. A few are never in their seats—they are on the move about the Senate chamber all the time.

It is a mistake to do one thing over and over and never to change off in work or play. This is trying to the nerves.

I have told you of the man who said he was "Nut 48." It was his job to screw on that particular nut in assembling automobiles. Day in and day out, nut 48 was the only thing to claim his attention. He said he would surely turn into nut 48 if he couldn't find a way to vary the monotony.

It isn't necessary to sit down and fold the hands, or to lie down to rest. Change the way of doing your work. Keep active, but use another set of muscles. Rest by taking on new action.

There is nothing so deadly as monotony. To do the same thing over and over is a trying undertaking. I went through the Bureau of Engraving the other day. I saw young women counting money, bills amounting to millions pass through their hands. But it is a monotonous calling. Perhaps it would be easier to do that act if we were counting our own money.

But, no matter what your job is, try to vary it enough to keep your nerves from getting on edge. Vary your physical exertions as much as possible. Be active, but try to rest in action.

Answers to Health Queries

J. A. M. Q.—Why does the heart pound and shake the whole system, accompanied by nervousness after meals?

A.—Palpitation due to either nervousness, indigestion or to a possible heart affection. It would be wise to have the heart examined to make sure it is normal and then definite treatment can be advised.

M. E. Q.—What causes me to have difficulty in keeping my balance? Things appear before my eyes until I can hardly see.

A.—This condition is often caused by biliousness. Your diet is probably at fault. Keeping the intestinal tract clear is very essential. For further information send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

A. N. Q.—What causes ridges in the finger nails?

A.—This may be caused by poor circulation, sometimes it is caused by improper manicuring.

Lovers' Lanes Even in City, Fay King Finds

By FAY KING

THOSE who have only lived in garden cities where the streets are bowered by trees, the air filled with scent of flowers and the song of birds, might think that young persons who live in the great, treeless cities of steel and stone have no lovers' lane!

But there they are wrong!

For if you have eyes for romance you will find as many happy lovers meet as ever dotted the mellow countryside, with loving glances and cooing conversation.

One has only to stroll through the golden lighted courts of the beautiful public buildings to find as many romantic "princes and princesses" as you will ever read about in the memoirs of ancient courts.

And I have seen many a loving pair stand leaning over the balcony of a great railway station as if it were a rustic bridge, gazing up at the painted stars upon its ceiling.

I don't doubt that they have even discovered a shooting star among them, and snatched that kiss such a star permits.

Fifth avenue might be just a country path to see those who cross it hand-in-hand!

And was the barge of Cleopatra any more beautiful and romantic than the top of a bus on a Summer's night?

The land of romance is mapped in the eyes of those who love. Even the wheeze of a peanut roaster can sound like a nightingale if the magic charm of romance be in one's heart!

It's not where you are—it's who you are with that makes a lover's lane!

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Thursday, February 23

Everything in Nature contains all the powers of Nature. Everything is made of one hidden stuff.—EMERSON.

AN eventful and prosperous day is foreshown by the very interesting chain of planetary configurations. Important change seems imminent, and this should bring decided advantages, in employment, financially and in personal or social contacts. It is a time for preparing plans wisely and pushing ahead under excellent stellar auspices for expansion and general satisfaction.

Those whose birthday it is are at the brink of a year of excellent accomplishment, with many advantages and gratified ambitions, financially and as to position and personal contacts. It is a time for forging ahead.

A child born on this day should be ambitious and enterprising and should find many avenues for using its talents and reaching its goal. It should attain good position in life.

Notable Nativity: G. F. Handel, composer.

Popularity of Suede

Suede is particularly smart this year. Although it is extensively used for trimming, the most attractive sports coats are of this material.

Simple Vamping

Lesson Ten

By HELEN ROWLAND

BE YOURSELF!

BE YOURSELF!

This is the first law of "vamping"—and the whole secret of charm and magnetism.

Personality is that drop of "difference" that God put into every human soul. It is the light that shines through and makes you radiant.

* * *

A pose hides your light under a bushel of artificiality and self-consciousness. It dims your radiance like a fussy lampshade.

Some girls turn on the "sex-appeal" with every glance. They flutter and shrug and look unutterable things, until men sprint for safety at sight of them.

HELEN ROWLAND

Others swagger, and do the "Little Brother," man-to-man stuff until men either chuckle with mirth or shudder at their approach. No man admires a poor imitation of himself. And there is something positively uncanny about a soft feminine little thing disguised in three-ply collar and babbling in slang and swear words, with a cigaret dangling from the corner of her mouth. God made you a woman. Why not pass for one?

Still other girls pretend to be cold and cynical and hardboiled when they are really yearning to be genial and sweet and responsive. They have a confused idea that this iron-clad, your-can't-put-anything-over-on-ME pose is "unruffled poise." But it no more resembles POISE than a musical comedy resembles life. It is as unconvincing as a tight corset on a fat dowager.

Most women would rather be "CUTE" than President! The average woman insists on getting herself up like a "cutey," no matter whether she resembles the Washington Monument or Grant's Tomb. She WILL be kittenish and cuddly and talk baby-talk, if it kills you! She's "somebody's little girl" every minute of the time!

* * *

There is hardly a girl who hasn't a "pet pose" which she puts on, every morning, with her make-up. But a pose never gets across with the right people. It merely fills them with boredom or amusement or mal-de-mer.

When in doubt—play trumps! And every girl's real trump in the love-game is naturalness, spontaneity—personality.

Not all men are attracted by the same things in women. Some men admire pep, jazziness and a ready wit—but many more are charmed by sweetness, serenity and sympathy. Some men like a strong, breezy girl who can swing a wicked golf stick—but many more prefer a fluffy, feminine dumbbell, who knows how to listen and gaze up at them adoringly.

* * *

Find your winning card, and play it UP, down, and all over the board! And don't peep over your neighbor's shoulder to see what card she's playing.

Be YOURSELF!

FOR THE LOVELORN

Two Sensible Pals

DEAR MISS GALE:

Just a few lines to Silvers. We are two sensible fellows looking for two sensible girls. We don't think much of girls who pet, smoke, etc., for when it comes time to settle down we don't want a wife that has been picked over by every Tom, Dick and Harry. You ask if there are any sensible fellows now days. We would like to meet two sensible girls. We are both 21 years old and don't bother with girls, because the ones we meet are just the type we dislike. We mean the flapper types. We would like to hear from Silvers. We would also like to have your opinion, Miss Gale. TWO SENSIBLE PALS.

I am quite sure you will not have much trouble in meeting equally sensible girls. There are lots of them, and they say they can't find any boys with ideals.

Puzzled

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am rather puzzled, and since you have given others such excellent advice I come to you. Just at present I'm in love with two fellows and can't decide which one I love best. How can I find out which one I really love the most? My girl friend wants advice, too. She is verym uch in love with a fellow, and although he speaks to her he never asks for a date. She cares for him very much and would like to know how to make him care for her. PUZZLED.

If you cannot make up your mind, be quite sure that you are not really in love with either of them, my dear. It is your friend's privilege to invite this boy to call if she thinks he would like to do so.

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

GLASS OF WATER CAUSED DISTRESS

But Ten Herbs Relieved Indigestion and Benefited Her Entire System.

"For years I had indigestion so badly that even the lightest kind of food caused gas—even a glass of water would distress me," was the statement of Mrs. K. M. Pohl, 264 East Beaver Street, Glenfield, Pa., (near Pittsburgh), to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating the great natural medicine, Ten Herbs. "The gas was worse at night and in the morning I would arise feeling dizzy, and black spots would seem to float before my eyes," Mrs. Pohl continued.

"My system seemd to be clogged with poisonous waste matter. For a long time I had rheumatism and my joints were terribly stiff—I could hardly bend my limbs. My bowels were irregular, and I was weak and run down in general. I am a lady past middle age and have been in poor health for a long time. It seemed as though I had almost everything the matter with me. I tried all kinds of medicines, but never got the right results.

"One day I read a statement in the paper that Ten Herbs had given relief in a case similar to mine, and this influenced me to give your medicine a trial. I have now taken several bottles and can truthfully say that Ten Herbs made a wonderful improvement in me. I digest food better and don't fill with gas like I used to. My bowels are more regular, and my liver and kidneys are working fine. Your medicine seemed to be just what my system required. It did not work on one organ alone, but gave my entire system a thorough cleansing. I cannot speak too highly of Ten Herbs. I gladly recommend it to all who suffer as I did."

Ten Herbs tones up the digestive organs, puts the lazy liver to work, regulates the bowels and benefits the kidneys. It cleanses, strengthens and revitalizes the whole system, peps up the appetite, and promotes sound, restful sleep.

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine. Free sample given.

MORPHINE IS SLY

JEKYLL-HYDE IN NARCOTIC FIELD

woman began to understand the use of morphine. The morphine itself was kept locked away—the hypodermic needle was regarded somewhat as the clinical thermometer is regarded today by most people. And morphine did its kindly work in the sick room without let or hindrance for years.

Then somebody who had been ill and suffering terrible pain came out of the hospital, craved for a moment the sweet ease of the drug, managed to get hold of some morphine and a needle and the curse was started.

The good was turned into evil in the twinkling of an eye, and now morphine counts its slaves by thousands and hundreds of thousands.

Morphine—A Demon

It is all so easy, so simple; no expensive layout, no telltale smoke, no noticeable period of disappearance and inaction.

A deck of the white powder—a jab with the needle and the thing is done.

Morphine is sometimes taken by the mouth, but the effect is not so quick and there seems to be a morbid and satanic fascination about the use of the needle.

Once observe a poor wretch shuddering with delight at the touch of the morphine needle and you will realize that when you have sunk deep enough in the morphine mire, there is a sweet joy in pain and a strange perverted pleasure in suffering.

A man can take morphia for years and his best friend may never suspect him. He is perhaps strange, moody; has not much appetite; is a little sharp-tempered, not very ambitious maybe, but unless by some accident he is deprived of his drug, he can go on a long time without discovery.

Down—Down—Down!

One of the most brilliant lawyers of the United States was a morphine slave for years.

He never tried a case without a stab of the deadly stuff.

He had a magnificent physique and splendid constitution, but they broke in time, as they always do under morphine.

He died in a beach-comber's hut in the South Seas, ragged, dirty, half insane and absolutely helpless with morphine.

One of the best-known women doctors in Chicago died not so very long ago of an overdose of morphine. She had been a victim to it for five years.

She began to take it to help her through a flu epidemic and she could not break the habit.

Another woman, who was president of one of the great women's organizations in the Middle West, died of pneumonia as the result of exposure due to morphine. She stayed out in a violent storm, wandering aimlessly about in the dead of the night, dazed with the morphine, which she thought she knew how to use "in moderation."

A woman known all over America for the delicate fancies she put into her books died from morphine.

Effect Varies

She had been taking it for years—heroin too, and cocaine and nobody could imagine what made her so queer at times.

This woman did not look in the least like an addict. She was rosy and she weighed nearly 200 pounds. The typical addict is yellow and very thin.

That woman was responsible for getting eight well-known, well-educated, well-bred women into the morphine habit.

She had many devoted friends, for she was a person of a sweet, attractive nature.

One day a friend went to see the woman writer.

"I'm so tired, I could drop," said the friend.

"Let me mix you a little something," said the writer, and she gave the friend a white powder to sniff.

Six months after that, the friend, a woman of standing and position, was arrested in a raid on a low dive in the Negro district where the habitues went for "snow" parties.

This story has been repeated over and over again in all grades of society.

They Want Company

One of the most marked characteristics of a drug addict is the persistent determination to get everybody else into the habit.

Men teach their wives to use morphine. Women persuade their husbands to try it "just once."

Sisters entrap sisters. Brothers scheme to get younger brothers into the horrible trap.

Boys in school "take a shot" to get through examinations.

Girls in high school "take a shot" to help make the grade.

Women in department stores pull through a hard day with morphine.

Nothing matters if you have enough morphine—nothing, not long hours, not aching feet, not aching head, not discouragement, not envy of others who come to buy the beautiful things the girl who sells it would like for herself.

Actresses take it for a first-night thrill. Singers get through a concert with it.

No Class Immune

Waiters in tough restaurants are particularly addicted to morphine.

Cab drivers "take a shot" and drive you or me to the station in more of a hurry than we had planned.

Editors, doctors, dentists, teachers, no class is immune, and in the underworld, morphine is as common as coffee.

Morphine—the soothing; morphine—the sweet friend of sorrow; morphine—the kindly friend that allays pain and comforts a lonely heart—and then suddenly turns and tortures as no inquisitor in medieval days ever dreamed of torturing.

Morphine—the smiling deceiver; morphine—the ignus fatuus, that leads her followers deeper and deeper into the treacherous bog; morphine—so easy to take, if you don't mind the sharp stab of the needle, and not so very hard to get, if you know the ropes.

A "Come-On" Game

You can carry enough morphine to "dope" an entire city in the pockets of an everyday suit of business clothes and nobody will ever suspect it.

There is money in the traffic—millions in it. The poor slaves will pay anything for it. The big dealers make a hundred per cent on every "deck of morphine" they sell. And they adulterate it at that.

A morphine slave must have his daily morphine. If he hasn't money enough to buy it, he will steal and he will murder for the money.

The dealer knows that and he puts the price up just as often as he feels like it.

The morphine slave must pay the price, whatever it is, and keep on paying until he dies of it, in disgrace and poverty and despair.

Heights to Depths

A high price to pay for a "shot of morphine," isn't it? Morphine deadens pain, deadens the sense of responsibility. It turns an active, good-humored, kindly, ambitious, well-meaning man or a gentle, cultivated, kind-hearted woman into a strange creature without heart, without sympathy, without any sense of responsibility of any kind whatsoever.

When a woman with children begins to take morphine, the first neglects the children. Then she neglects herself. She doesn't comb her hair. She forgets her daily bath. Her clothes get ragged, and she doesn't even know it. She has no appetite. She does not laugh. She doesn't even smile. She is haggard, yellow-skinned, dull-eyed.

The man who takes morphine becomes, in due time, just a mere shell — a sort of walking corpse, without ambition, without hope, without remorse, without memory.

Morphine is a depressing, a soothing, quieting, pain-stopping drug.

Heroin is stronger. It acts more quickly, and, strange to say, it is both depressing and stimulating. Cocaine stimulates—cocaine, the third sister in the weird family of narcotics.

Who shall tell the story of cocaine so as to make those who are not familiar with its mysterious and diabolical work understand even a small part of the hideous mischief of America today?

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Here Languishes as Palm Beach Winter Colony Keeps Friends Busy With Brilliant Events

WHILE their friends in Pittsburgh are in a state of inertia as far as social activities are concerned, the society folk of the city who have joined the winter colony at Palm Beach are busy keeping up with a season rivaling in brilliance and number of events the season recently ended here,

One of the leading events of the Palm Beach season was the concert sponsored by the Society of Fine Arts, given Monday evening at Palm Beach by Geraldine Farrar. Of course the Pittsburghers at the resort were represented at the event. The Alfred G. Kays, who are spending the winter at Palm Beach, entertained a party in their box at the concert. Another prominent Pittsburgh society woman entertaining was Mrs. Henry R. Rea. Of course her daughter, Mrs. George Andrew Benney, helped her to entertain her guests. Mrs. Benney, I'm sure you will recall, is the former Edith Anne Rea, whose marriage announcement created so much interest during the holidays. Her marriage had been kept a secret, you'll recall, for some time,

I hear that one of Pittsburgh's most eligible bachelors, Richard King Mellon, was among those attending the concert. By the way, the Herbert A. Mays and Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Jones III have just joined their friends at Palm Beach.

Although the social calendar of yesterday in Pittsburgh could boast of few affairs, it did contain a most important event —the wedding of Katherine Cunningham and George Field MacDonald. The wedding took place last evening at 8 o'clock in the home of Katherine's brother and sister-in-law, the Crawford Boyer Cunninghams, with the Rev. Dr. Albert Edward Day, of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, as the officiant.

Forming a picturesque background for the ceremony was the fireplace of the living room, banked on either side with a lovely profusion of spring flowers. Arranged in standards and vases, which were placed about the room, were snapdragons, daffodils, sweet peas, roses and begonias.

HEADS NEW D. A. R.

Mrs. Joseph A. Baldridge is regent of the new Massy White Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and is presiding at the Washington's birthday luncheon today in the "Congress of Clubs."

MRS. JOSEPH A. BALDRIDGE

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, and a very lovely bride she was. Her gown was one of the most interesting I have seen this season. It was of white satin, of course, and was one of those interesting period frocks with uneven hem line and bouffant skirt. The tight fitting bodice of the gown had a deep bertha of exquisite Duchess point lace, which also formed a deep border of the frock, falling at the left side in two points which fell below the hemline. A court train of the satin, lined with shell pink georgette, was held in place on the left shoulder and again at the waistline, falling in a cascade point. Her veil was of Duchess lace, confined by a band of pearls about her head. Her flowers were white lilacs, gardenias and sweetheart roses, showered with lilies of the valley.

Kathryn Franzell and Mrs. Frank Gilman Allen, the former Eleanor Hamilton Wallace, the bride's only attendants, wore gowns alike except for color. Kathryn's frock was shell pink and Mrs. Allen's was maize. Their dresses were fashioned of chiffon, over crepe of the same color. Pointed berthas of Alencon lace, starting at the waistline of the bodices, fell over the shoulder, with the ends tied in the back. The same lace formed deep, pointed flounces on the skirt, which had an uneven hemline.

They carried Dresden bouquets. Mrs. S. Woodward Cunningham, mother of the bride, was gowned in black Lyons maline lace over orchid satin. Black chiffon, held in place with an ornament of black sequins, was used to drape the skirt. She wore a corsage of Cattleya orchids. Mrs. George Field MacDonald, mother of the bridegroom, appeared in black Chantilly lace over flesh satin, and wore a corsage of orchids.

Following a visit to the Bahamas, South America, Cuba and Central America, Mr. and Mrs. McDonald will return to Pittsburgh and will reside on Bartlett street.

The bride attended Thurston and later, like so many of the social set, finished at one of the big eastern women's colleges—Wellesley.

An interesting engagement just made known is that of Louise McConway, daughter of the junior William McConways, of South Linden avenue, and Stanley O. Law, son of the C. C. Laws, of South Graham street. No date, I hear, has been set for the wedding.

For her sister-in-law, Mrs. Jesse Fletcher Macfarlane, the former Elizabeth Phillips, Elizabeth Macfarlane, daughter of the James R. Macfarlanes, of Woodland road, gave a tea in her home yesterday afternoon.

The Delta Chapter of the Beta Chi sorority gave a bridge party Saturday in the Garden tearoom in honor of its four new members, initiated several weeks ago, Miss Virginia Stewart, Miss Evelyn Coukhart, Miss Lois MacLane and Miss Mildred Kumer. Miss Helen Koehrer is president of the active chapter.

The marriage of Miss Mildred Rebecca Forsaith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Forsaith, of Mt. Lebanon, and Wilbur Eugene Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Johnson, of New Castle, was solemnized today at 11:45 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Dr. C. E. Macartney. The bride wore rose beige georgette with hat to match and her flowers were orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Isabel Taylor Zinn, as maid of honor, appeared in apple green crepe satin with a small black hat, and her flowers were butterfly roses and pink sweet peas. Justus Louis Mulert, of Mt. Lebanon, was best man. A small reception at the church followed the ceremony, and later there was a breakfast for the families in the Garden tearoom. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will take a Western trip and after May 1 will be at home in Peacock Manor.

Mrs. Anna A. Secrist, of Bellevue, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Helen Lucile Secrist, to Dr. William H. Ittel, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Ittel, of California avenue, North Side. No wedding date has been set.

We know these prices seem impossible, but if you doubt our statements come in and see for yourself.

Owing to a change in our merchandising policy, we are withdrawing from the retail field in Pittsburgh. We shall continue in the future, as we have for 85 years in the past, to build pianofortes of the finest possible construction.

In order to liquidate our stock quickly we have slashed prices without regard for previous selling price or cost. Every piano must go and go quickly. It is our intention to sell every piano we have on our floor. Only once in a lifetime does an opportunity of this kind present itself. We know that during no time in our 85 years of piano-making and selling have we ever offered values that are in any way equal to those listed in this advertisement.

BANKERS TOLD OF BOND ISSUES

By WILLIAM B. BROWN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Harrisburg, Feb. 22.—Pennsylvania, with 6 per cent of the nation's banking institutions within its borders, possesses more than 10 per cent of the banking resources of the United States, Peter G. Cameron, State Secretary of Banking, told nearly 500 bank officials and directors at the annual meeting of Group Five, Pennsylvania Bankers' Association, here today. Eleven counties in this district and 226 banks were represented.

New York alone surpasses the Keystone State in the number of banks and total resources, Cameron said. His talk stressed the importance of the state's financial institutions.

Auditor General Edward Martin, who also addressed the bankers, stressed in exact figures the cost to the state if all of the proposed bond amendments to the state constitution are passed at the general election next fall.

Reviewing each of the proposed bond issues, Martin said their passage would cost the state an additional $7,452,000 each year for 30 years, and said the sum might be raised by possible additional taxation.

Martin also outlined the system followed by the Legislature in making appropriations. He dwelt particularly on the proposal to issue an additional $50,000,000 in bonds for highway construction. He showed that the present expenditures of the Highway Department, exclusive of bond issues, are only slightly in excess of receipts.

HEARST PAPERS PRAISED BY GEORGIANS

By Universal Service.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 22.—Executives of the many Hearst newspaper interests, Gov. Hardman, James B. Nevin, editor of the Georgian; Miss Emily Woodware, president of the Georgia Press Association; Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe University, and a score of other civic leaders of Atlanta were present last night at the annual convention dinner of the Hearst executives, at the Biltmore Hotel, which was one of the most brilliant assemblages of the season in Atlanta. W. C. Edwards, publisher of the Atlanta Georgian, was toastmaster.

The visiting executives of the Hearst interests have been received in Atlanta with warm cordiality this week, where their annual convention is being held.

Milton Dargan, Jr., president of the Chamber of Commerce, warmly praised the Hearst newspapers for spreading Atlanta's advertising campaign and other service.

"They have made our story more effective than it could have been otherwise and they have given more to the development of Atlanta and Georgia than can be estimated," he said. "Atlanta and Georgia appreciate more than tongue can tell their co-operation ...ices in space, talent ...n."

FRIEND

Ingsdale declared: ...newspapers have proven themselves true friends of Atlanta and Georgia, true friends of progressive and substantial development and effective friends through the power of a chain of newspapers that reaches one-fifth of the readers of the United States."

Col. Frank Knox, recently appointed general manager of the Hearst newspapers, answering these and other declarations of welcome and appreciation, assured Atlanta that the Hearst newspapers everywhere have been active in the development of their regions.

"It is gratifying to me as a New Englander and an American to learn that Georgia has been active in developing its industrial possibilities and resources," said Col. Knox. "So long as a region is exclusively or predominantly agricultural, it has inevitably a narrow viewpoint. But when it becomes an industrial region, its problems are those of other industrial regions, and of the entire nation. It becomes a region with a national viewpoint, and a better national understanding is the result.

"This organization which the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has honored will seek first of all to be useful to the communities and the regions in which its papers are published and to be expressive of the truest Americanism and independence."

MAIL WORKERS MEET TODAY

Postal employes from Western Pennsylvania will gather today at Franklin, Pa., in the interest of furthering the legislation of the Dale-Lahlbach bill, which provides for optional retirement of civil service employes after 30 years service with annuities of $1,200 a year and salary deductions. The bill is now being considered by the civil service committees of the Senate and the House.

James F. Gallagher, president of the Joint Association of Postal Employes of Western Pennsylvania said last night that the members of the association were not concerning themselves about getting out at an early age but for the right to retire when they feel that they no longer can continue to work.

These local organizations yesterday indorsed the bill: Knights of Pythias, No. 36; Clyde Kelly Letter Carriers Band; Local No. 5, United Workmen, Electric Workers; Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 71; Electrotypers Local No. 68, and Amalgamated Clothing Workers Local No. 38.

DISMISS TWO PATROLMEN

Two patrolmen were recommended for dismissal by the police trial board yesterday, one because he used a city motorcycle on a speedy trip through Wilmerding borough and awakened the residents of the community by sounding his siren during the early morning hours, and the other because he demanded pay for attending a dance to which he had not been invited. The officers are Motorcycle Patrolman George M. Blair and Patrolman John E. Hennesy of the Mt. Washington station.

Blair said he had visited his mother in Pitcairn and was in a hurry to return to his own home. He admitted quarreling with pedestrians in Pitcairn. The testimony against Hennesy was that he attended a dance without orders and that he demanded pay for his presence.

JOBBERS NECESSARY, CREDO CLUB IS TOLD

It is impossible for food products manufacturers to make proper distribution except through jobbers, it was averred at yesterday's meeting of the Credo Club of the Credit Association of Western Pennsylvania, which met in the Chamber of Commerce to discuss last week's meeting of the Pennsylvania Conference at Harrisburg. The feeling prevailed, it was stated by returning delegates, that there are too many jobbers in some lines, that cost of distribution is excessive and manufacturing costs low. Government agencies are said to be making a survey. Among those who spoke on convention topics, beside J. W. Thomas who presided, were W. O. Ettel, Joseph Solinsky, L. J. ...ayer, J. M. Wil...

PROBE PIT BLAST, 12 DEAD

SIX BODIES STILL IN DEBRIS

By ALBERT GOUGH,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Feb. 22.—With a triple inquiry to determine the cause of the blast which wrecked Kinloch Mine of the Valley Camp Coal Company under way, rescuers announced that all the bodies of missing victims probably would be recovered today.

Of the 21 men who entered the Kinloch and Valley Brick Company mines, Monday and yesterday, nine are safe, three bodies have been removed, and three others have been located. Six are believed to lie behind debris which was encountered yesterday.

Federal Bureau of Mines workers, with state mine and coal company inspectors, have been studying the result of the blast in the mine to determine the cause of the explosion and fix responsibility.

Seven of the entombed are in the Kinloch mine, where three bodies were taken out yesterday. No hope is held out for these men, mine experts declaring no human could live long in the deadly black damp. The two entombed in the Valley Brick Company mine are known to be dead, rescuers having reached their bodies yesterday afternoon, but they were too weak to bring the victims to the surface.

The men whose bodies are still in the brick-yard mine are W. N. Beck and Louis Venzel, both of Valley Heights. They were the first of the five men to go into the mine unaware of the explosion at Kinloch early yesterday morning. The other three were saved by a mule, which hauled them to the surface after they, too, had been overcome.

The men still in Kinloch mine are: John Poole, Charles Wise, John Clark, Negro; Parley Bell, Negro; William Ivory, Negro; West Blackman, Negro, and Andres Stroter, Negro. The bodies of Thomas Burtoft, foreman; William Casey and Kenzie Nice were taken out of Kinloch yesterday afternoon.

More than a dozen rescue squads worked all day yesterday and last night to reach the men in Kinloch. At one time 53 men were working in the pit at the same time. T. H. Thompson, of the State Bureau of Mines, at the same time was conducting an official investigation.

CITY CELEBRATES WASHINGTON DAY

With flags flung into the morning sunshine and with a pronounced holiday air everywhere, Pittsburgh today manifested more than the usual interest in celebrating Washington's birthday. Banks and public offices were closed, and patriotic exercises scheduled in all the schools. Holiday crowds were entertained by special matinee performances in all the theaters, and many social affairs have been planned for tonight.

In the schools the observance of the one hundred and ninety-sixth anniversary of Washington's birth had been arranged principally by the teachers who joined in classroom exercises in which all pupils had an opportunity to participate. In the Washington School, Fortieth street, where the 700 pupils have their playground on the soil made sacred by Washington's memorable crossing of the Allegheny river in 1753, Principal J. J. Coll arranged for a community celebration in the school auditorium Friday afternoon.

The Pennsylvania Society, Sons of the American Revolution, at its annual meeting in the building of the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, held an election of officers and adopted a resolution favoring the preservation of the Allegheny Arsenal gateway as a historical monument in Pittsburgh.

Members of the Washington Infantry and veterans of that military company will hold their annual celebration tonight in Webster Hall, and many organizations of ex-service men in the World War have planned social gatherings with a patriotic flavor. Allegheny County Council, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will hold its twenty-ninth annual reception and ball in the William Penn Hotel. The Mothers of Democracy held a patriotic service in North Side City Hall during the afternoon. Pittsburgh City Post No. 59, American Legion, observed the anniversary at its luncheon in the Nixon Restaurant.

RANKIN CAR HOUSE WINS SAFETY TROPHY

For showing the most efficient accident-prevention record for January, the Rankin car house was awarded a prize bronze plaque at a safety rally of the Pittsburgh Railways Company last night. The award was in accordance with a new system of competition among the car houses. James Kilty of the Western Pennsylvania Division of the National Safety Council spoke.

BEECHVIEW AIDS MINE FAMILIES

A collection totaling $32.50 and a truckload of shoes and clothing were donated at a miners' relief entertainment held last night by the South Beechview Board of Trade in the Lee School, Beechview. The committee in charge included F. K. Van Essen, chairman; R. N. Hill, N. C. Volkay, H. G. Fisher and F. L. Page. An address was delivered by Fred Gulick, of the United Mine Workers, on causes and present conditions of the strike.

PITTSBURGH AUTO CLUB ELECTS NEW GOVERNORS

At the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh last night in the club headquarters, 5905 Baum boulevard, E. Bruce Hill, Dr. William B. McKenna, C. Glenn Sipe, Alex H. King, M. F. Leslie, W. W. Mearkle, Joseph H. Phillips and Frank D. Saupp were elected to serve on the board of governors.

ARREST MAN ON STREET AS BAD CHECK PASSER

Accused of having passed bogus checks for small amounts on Pittsburgh merchants, Clinton E. Hichok, 18, of Massillon, O., was arrested by city detectives at Sixth avenue and Smithfield street last night. He was lodged in the Central Police Station to await a hearing today.

Frederick Maughan, 14, left his home at 56 Labelle street, Wilkinsburg, Saturday evening to sweep the snow. We Have a Lot in Common With Animals—Our Body Not The Best Known

In yesterday's chapter of "Why We Behave Like Human Beings," in The Sun-Telegraph, the reader learned that low-browed morons, of which so much is heard today, are nothing new in the human family. This fact is disclosed by the fossils of men and apes of half a million years ago. How much man and his ape cousins resemble each other was shown.

By Using Brains Man Got Ahead

CHAPTER XI.

THE race to be human began with the first living being. That being was possible because the earth brought from the sun some very remarkable elements and because the sun continued to shine. Under its beneficial rays, certain elements became so dynamically constituted that they began to perform like an organic individual. It could do what matter had not done before, behave like a living being. It grew, but its size was limited by its nature, as is that of a raindrop or a drop of oil or a piece of jelly. It split up. It developed new ways of growth, and evolved sex.

GEORGE A. DORSEY

Various theories have been proposed as to how all this came about; even propaganda for taking the future of the race in our own hands. Meanwhile, do not forget that the egg with which we begin life has been living since life began; that egg has had a long history and has learned much about life. Otherwise we could not learn to behave like human beings in so short a time.

Our most human parts—brains, skull, teeth, voice organs, upright gait, and fingers—are not new, they are not unique, they are not ours exclusively; for life itself they are not even essential. Some human beings never use their brains, their skull is merely a frame for features, they lost all their teeth, and their fingers are all thumbs. No, our most humanoid parts will not give us much clue to the nature of the ceaselessly changing creature that became at last human.

Vitals to Living

A man, monkey, opossum, lizard, frog, shark, flea, fishworm, oyster and malaria germs have one thing in common; they must eat and breathe or die. Every animal must have lungs and stomach, or the equivalent. Call it viscera. Viscera are vitals, the something without which there is no living animal. What else have they in common? A motor mechanism to bring the necessary elements of life within reach of the living body's vitals.

The history of our body is primarily that of the mechanism for getting food, ways of avoiding being eaten as food, and method of growth. In other words, the chemical activities whereby living beings maintain life are fundamentally the same in all animals, but the laboratory in which these activities take place and the mechanisms for carrying the laboratory about and for acquiring information as to food, enemies, etc., vary enormously.

Even our primate ancestor up a tree lacked no parts to become human; certain parts merely had to be altered. Say two million years. Beyond these two, other millions passed while body and brain bided their time; the earth was not yet quite ready for nature's great experiment.

Wits Man's Best Weapon

As Bergson puts it: "Man only realized himself by abandoning a part of himself on the way; he was not yet ready to fight for his life with his mere wits." Wits are his greatest weapon.

We must not think of our body as the most or the best this or that. In many ways the eagle has a more specialized structure; it excels in eyesight, respiratory system, skeleton and locomotion. Even the bee in its own line, as Thomson says, is hardly inferior to man and represents an achievement that angels might desire to look into.

Life has tried out countless bodies. Certain species of snails and crustacea have survived almost unchanged from pre-Cambrian days, sixty million years ago. Two-million-year-old fossil ants embalmed in amber are so much like ants of today that, could they awake from their sleep, they could recognize their descendants if their noses were not stopped up. They kept to the middle of the road. That man evolved from a lowly Primate means that the Primate itself was neither an accident nor a highbrow, that it was not too far removed from the body its ancestor brought up out of the mud on to the dry land.

Why Man Progressed

Many families of nature's masterpieces have no living representative because they over-specialized; they gave up so much to tusk, trunk, canine, wing, leg, stomach, size, height, length, or armor, that they had not enough to live on. They put all their eggs in one basket. Earth's crust is full of these fancy forms, so specialized they could not meet change. Man got ahead because he could grasp an idea, could talk it over with his fellowmen and think up new ideas. The amazing thing is not that he became human, but that he can be so inhuman in so many ways.

Reading the time-table backward suggests a parallel process which seems to have been at work in human culture: progress by leaps; between long pauses. The pauses grow shorter as time moves on.

For a hundred thousand years man gets along without steam-control. The steam engine is invented. In the twinkling of an eye steamships plow the seas and every land is ribbed with shining rails. The Age of Steam blossomed out of nothing. Gossip formerly passed from mouth to ear; at breakfast, now, Cape Town reads of the color of the hair of the girl the Prince of Wales danced with the night before on Long Island. This is another New Age.

Speeding Up Life

How did man get along without radio, newspaper, steel, steam, plumbing, arch, calendar, spear, flint knife, fire? He did. But he gets along faster with them. So with life itself. It got along without mammary glands and internal incubators, skull and vertebral column, head and tail, brains. But with brains, head, backbone and placenta, the procession speeded up, life shot out in new directions.

Progress is often made by lying low; let the other fellow try out Nature's new-fangled notions. By holding out, man came on the stage during the big scene. When the call went forth for clever people who could double, shiftly people who could walk back to town if the show "blew," who could catch and fry their own fish in case of need, who could dig out, swim across, climb up and jump down, who were handy with their hands, had good memories and could mix, man appeared.

All this took brains: a big brain, a brain so big it had to wrinkle or burst its case; a brain with frontal lobes so big they dwarf the hind-brain. A brain big in every way; in absolute size and weight, in proportion to spinal cord, in proportion to body.

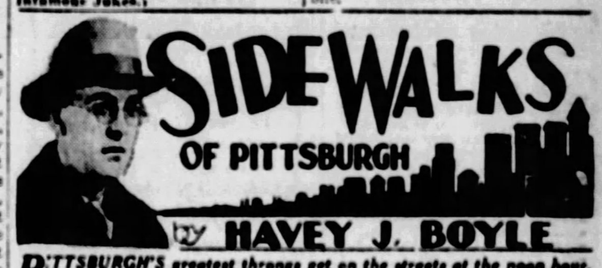
HUNT TORCH FIEND IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(INS.)—A fiend who drugged Miss Margaret Brown, 40-year-old governess, robbed her of her life savings, saturated her clothing with kerosene, then set her afire and left her to die by the roadside near Bernardsville, N. J., was sought by police of this city today. The slayer was a suitor of the spinster, it is believed.

Search for the murderer shifted to New York following the discovery last night that Miss Brown was employed by Mrs. James Gillespie of this city.

Partial identification of the victim was made early today by Mrs. Gillespie and Miss Mary Brown, of Fort Lee, N. J., the slain spinster's niece. The niece telephoned to Bernardsville police that because of the detailed description of the clothing and a long scar on the abdomen, she was certain that the victim was her aunt. Today she was to visit Somerville, N. J., where an autopsy was performed, to make a complete identification.

After working as a governess for 20 years, during which she saved $9,000, Miss Brown left the employ of Mrs. Gillespie last Monday morning with the announced intention of going to California. Mrs. Gillespie expressed the belief that the governess planned to pay a farewell visit to a man who had been keeping company with her. She gave police a description of this suitor, who is now being sought as the probable slayer. Police believe he took her from New York to the scene of the crime in an automobile.



PITTSBURGH'S greatest throngs get on the streets at the noon hour. There is a converging of humanity on the downtown streets at that time not equaled at any other time. The office buildings and the big stores pour out a stream of employes to mingle with an army of shoppers and business people from other sections who come downtown for lunch.

Restaurants have trouble in handling the peak loads which come at this time. For the rest of the day business may be just so-so, but at the noon hour it is not uncommon to see groups standing three deep at some of the lunch places.

PITTSBURGH'S nights are restful downtown. Fifth avenue blazes and spins for a few hours during the theater and movie rush, but elsewhere activity is almost suspended. This is accounted for by the fact that the many communities surrounding Pittsburgh take care of their own inhabitants in the way of entertainment.

East Liberty, for instance, has such a metropolitan air that residents of that section are content with their own diversions.

AFTER one has seen a drawing room drama one wonders whether the stage people imitate the wealthy or whether the wealthy imitate the stage people. That both these branches of society have something in common is easily discernible by a study of each.

After a long struggle over many years the theater has come to be viewed as respectable, if at times considered a little immoral. There was a time in the history of the theater when actors were as low in the social scale as present day wrestlers.

AMONG the many pleasant and comfortable bookshops of the city one can list Squirrel Hill's at 5843 Forbes street, operated by Katherine Kuhn, Inc. There never was a poor bookstore. All are good. In any of them one can encounter adventure, romance; sail the high seas, mingle with pirates, other rogues and rascals, and the greatest of heroes.

MORRY GOLDMAN went down to market to buy some spinach and other vegetables. He took them home in his machine to discover on arriving that the man who sold him the spinach said he was on his way out to the Goldman home. It appeared a lot of money was missing. Mr. Godman went into the kitchen to look over his packages and on emptying the bag containing the spinach was more or less astounded to come upon about $5,000 in paper money. It was mixed up with the spinach by the salesman.

It's a good thing the marketeer called because Mr. Goldman is very fond of spinach and he might have devoured one or two thousand dollars, properly dressed, of course, with vinegar and salt and pepper, before discovering the error.

Warner Brothers Will Make Three Pictures in England And Also Several in Germany

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.

THE foreign element have been raising such ructions over the influence of American customs, clothes and scenery, that Warner Brothers are planning to make a few pictures on German and English soil. Darryl Francis Zanuck, the youthful general manager of Warner Brothers, who arrived home this week from a foreign jaunt, announces that negotiations are now on for a German studio and that he and Jack Warner have arranged for the production of three pictures in England.

That ought to appease some of the long hairs who have lamented loudly and often that England, Germany, France, Italy and a few other countries were imitating our American manners.

I believe I stated some time ago that Warner Brothers are looking for a musical comedy to be produced with the vitaphone. Well, they seem to have landed it in "No, No, Nanette,' which, I hear whispered, will be made very shortly.

Norman Kerry will brighten the corners of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios once again. I say brighten the corners, for Mr. Kerry's gaiety and merriment, when he played opposite Lillian Gish in her "Annie Laurie" picture, is even now discussed.

He is back at M. G. M. to play the male lead in "Tide of Empire," Cosmopolitan's picture based on Peter G. Kyne's story. Joan Crawford has already been named as leading lady and Al Rogell as director.

Helen of Troy has left Hollywood. Talking in plain language, Maria Corda, who created the Spartan vamp in "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," has accepted an offer to make a picture for the British International Film Company, under the supervision of Victor Sadille. Miss Corda's decision is interesting and somewhat unexpected. After her appearance in the First National film, a modern version of Helen's domestic difficulties everyone thought Miss Corda would be given a big starring pact.

It only takes a small thing to make a player change his tactics. Estelle Taylor, who has gone in consistently for heavy dramatic roles, has been advised by Al Green to do comedy drama. Mr. Green has just finished directing her in "Honor Bound" and at the moment is searching for the sort of comedy drama he thinks would be suitable for Miss Taylor.

OPENING BILL IN STANLEY

For the opening of the new Stanley Theater Seventh street and Liberty avenue, Stanley-Davis-Clark have booked "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," the screen version of Anita Loos' popular story. The stage attraction for the opening week is to be Anatole Friedland and his revue.

"Greenwich Village Follies, 1928," begins an engagement of one week in the Alvin next Monday evening February 27. Blossom Seeley, Dr. Rockwell, Grace Brinkley, Benny Fields, Jack Sanborn and Jans and Whalen are featured. The seat sale begins Thursday morning.

Seven companies of "Broadway," night club melodrama, current attraction in the Pitt, are playing in the United States this season. The original company, which opened at the Broadhurst Theater in September 1926, has just terminated its run of a year and a half at that house. There will be a matinee of "Broadway" tomorrow.

Lenore Ulric, Belasco star, who is playing "Lulu Belle" in the Nixon this week, says: "I have never had a role that entails so much preparation and that makes such heavy demands as 'Lulu Belle.'"

The piquant comedienne, Marion Sunshine, will head the Keith-Albee vaudeville bill at the Davis Theater next week, appearing in a new and elaborate musical act, "Just a Chorus Girl." The screen attraction for the week will be "Love and Learn."

COLLEGES TO COMPETE IN GLEE CLUB CONTEST

Five colleges including State, Bucknell, Juniata, Carnegie Tech and Allegheny are to compete Friday evening, February 24, in Carnegie Music Hall. Harvey Gaul will direct the combined clubs in singing Kremer's Prayer of Thanksgiving. Dr. Will Earhart, Mr. Earnest Lunt and Mr. J. Fred Lissfelt have been invited to be judges.

SANDERS MAKES READY FOR WHITEMAN'S VISIT

With many reservations already received for the appearance of Paul Whiteman and his 36-piece recording orchestra at Sanders, Aspinwall, Saturday night, the management is completing plans for the enlargement of the Terrace Garden room to accommodate patrons. A temporary partition which has been placed for use during the winter months has been removed, thus giving one-third more space, and also making accessible the second dance floor. The bandstand also is being enlarged to accommodate the 36-piece Whiteman orchestra.

STOLEN PUSH CART COSTS NEGRO $10 FINE

Two months' use of a city push-cart cost Robert Turner, 32, Negro, of 1312 Bedford avenue, $10. About Christmas time, Turner is alleged to have stolen a push cart from the Point Bridge. Yesterday when it passed Patrolman David McGreevy, despite its coat of new paint, the patrolman recognized it and arrested Turner. Turner told Magistrate G. H. England that he had purchased it from a friend.

PITT BUREAU HELPS GIRLS TO FIND WORK

The Women's Employment Bureau of the University of Pittsburgh enabled women students at that institution to earn nearly $4,000 during the last semester, according to Isabelle Anderson, head of the bureau. This amount was earned only by the women who obtained extra work through the bureau and in addition many other students obtained work through other agencies.

40 DANGEROUS AGE, SAYS AUTHOR

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBARRY.

May all the critics of Flaming Youth, great or small, read this! Then pick out a nice soft spot and flop right down and give up the ghost.

Listen to our dear friend and noble defender John Erskine:

"If youth is the dangerous age—what about 40? I call that the dangerous age! It takes technique to be really bad and you certainly can't acquire much technique before 40."

He says flappers and sheiks can't be bad, because they haven't had enough practice. That it is the older generation which has lost its head, and has gone off at such an emotional tangent, that its pretty hard for some people to tell just where the smoke is coming from. But it's coming from the camp of Mr. and Mrs. Forty-or-more.

As for Adam and Eve and their famous apple eating days, he believes things have changed so little that you'd hardly notice it where men and women are concerned. And maybe Helen of Troy, at whose private life he so graciously let us get a peek, did have the sort of face that would launch a thousand ships. But who wants to launch ships when there isn't even champagne to break over the bow any more?

"Man is stupid. Woman is irritable! That sums up them both, young and old," explains our handsome, big Mr. Erskine. He has dark hair, dark blue eyes, and is a massive fellow with a square jaw and a rumbling, friendly laugh that makes you feel that nothing you might ask him could ruffle his good nature in the least.

He paid woman of today a high compliment when he said very seriously,

"No matter how people may criticize the modern woman and her plunging into work and politics, I feel that she is making a great contribution to society and trying to be sincere. Women from now on will have careers. Nothing can stop them, despite all the wrangle and they are to be admired for it."

Here he added as an after thought:

"The advantage of the modern woman of 40 or 45 over the woman of years ago is that she does not age so quickly. Her home work is not so hard and she is fit and fine at an age at which years ago she was a human wreck. It is better sometime that she work after she has raised her family, then she hasn't so much time to get into mischief."

That was the place in the conversation where the novelist declared it to be the mischief for which the youngsters get the blame. Like stealing the apple pie and blaming it on little Johnny because he happens to have a dirty face and you know how to eat without spreading it.

Judge Lindsey and his companionate marriage idea he summed up with his rumbling laugh—and:

"That idea would occur to no one but an old man who wasn't in love! Youth in love loses its head—and doesn't even dream of anything but air castles of happiness."

The great professor advises the young:

"Marry as soon as you can—if you can, and want to. For the longer you wait the more likely you are to remain single and that is not always best. Marriage is natural and the basis of civilization. Nothing will change it."

And other little pleasant things picked at random in the interview with this very charming and brilliant man were:

Woman is getting more and more beautiful. Modern style enhances her charm. Helen of Troy was just a girl born a few centuries too soon. She had the modern trend of thought—or rather of expressing herself. Because woman, yes, yes she is verily the daughter of her Mother Eve. And she has not really changed except for a few more clothes and a little less hair.

MONEY LOVE by BEATRICE BURTON

(Copyright 1928, Central Press Association.)

Lily Is Requested to Get Her Belongings From Pat's Flat

IN SILENCE they walked down to the corner, where a red vase and a blue vase shone out from a drug store window.

"Pat, I really came to let you know how sorry I am about the piston ring flopping," Lily said, when they were near the corner. "I am sorry—terribly, terribly sorry."

He did not answer. He seemed to have nothing to say to her, this man who had once cared for no other person in the whole wide world but her. He just walked along as if she had not spoken.

"You're not very polite, are you?" Lily asked, absolutely forgetting how extremely impolite, not to say disgraceful, she herself had just been in the Jettersons' house.

All she remembered—all she wanted to remember of that scene—was the way Elizabeth Ertz had taken hold of Pat's arm, as if he were her special property. She found her small, even teeth as she thought of it.

"Pat, ARE you crazy about that Ertz?" she asked. "You know, Pat, we once loved each other a very great deal. I love you more than I ever shall love anybody again—and it makes me wildly jealous to think of her daring to lay her hand on your arm like that—"

Then Pat did answer her. "You're what people call 'a dog in the manger,' if you'll excuse me for saying such a thing to you," he said, in a flat, level tone. "You don't want me yourself, and you don't want anyone else to have me. You want to go through with this divorce and marry Drummond, and then have the satisfaction of knowing that I'm still unhappy about you. You want me to promise not to see Elizabeth again, don't you?"

That was exactly what Lily would have liked to have him promise. But she was ashamed to confess it, so she just tossed her head and ran ahed of him into the drug store.

He stood outside the booth while she telephoned Staley and asked him to come for her.

Then she went out into the small, cluttered, brightly-lighted store, where she had always traded when she was a housewife in this ordinary neighborhood of nice, pleasant ordinary folks.

The druggist spoke pleasantly to her now, and then glanced sharply from her to Pat. Evidently he had heard bits of the gossip about them.

"Don't wait with me," Lily said to Pat, wishing that she had telephoned for a cab instead of for Staley. For one thing, she was not eager to see him that night, and for another, she did not want him to find Pat here with her when he arrived in his car. He would wonder what she had come to see Pat for, and she would not know what to tell him. "Go back to your Ertz and your wonderful Jettersons. I'll sit here and read a movie magazine."

But, although she bought one and climbed up on a high stool and pretended to read it, he did not stir. "I'll stay here until you're safe in the car," he said stubbornly, and stay he did.

"Please don't let Staley see you!" She had to plead with him at last. "He'll wonder what on earth I came to see you for—and I don't want him to know that I did see you."

Pat looked at her with solemn blue eyes. "Listen to me," he said. "Why don't you be straight with this man? Why don't you tell him you came down here to tell me you were sorry about the piston ring being a failure? Not that it was a failure, exactly. But it wasn't any better than the one his company have, and they have the money to advertise theirs. To push it—and Roy and I haven't. We bit off more than we could chew, that's all."

"All right—but please don't let him see you, anyway," Lily begged. "I don't want him to be angry with me—and if you're out of sight I can think of some yarn to tell him."

Pat gave her a still deeper look. He seemed to be looking 'way into the depths of her heart and her soul. "You just don't know how to tell the truth, do you?" he asked. "I wonder if you ever will."

And then he turned away from her and went out of the little, bright, untidy store and down the street. Lily could hear him whistling Sue's favorite piece, "Blue Heaven," as he went.

She stood at the door, watching for Staley, and thinking how she would have liked to follow Pat into the darkness.

"He's going back to The Ertz," she told herself, wretchedly. "He's in love with her now, and so he hates me."

On a warm March day, some three weeks later, a plain, cheap little white envelope with her name written across it in very beautiful handwriting, came to Lily in the morning's mail.

The writing had a familiar look, and suddenly she remembered where she had seen it before—on the grocery slips from Mrs. France's grocery store. It was Pat's mother's writing.

The letter within had no heading. It started right off with a sentence that went straight to the point.

"Pat is getting ready to give up his flat, and there are two or three things of yours in it. A pale-pink chiffon slip, a lavender silk cushion and a box of things that you used to make up your face with. Also a flask and a silver cigaret box. I suppose the cigaret box is yours. I cannot imagine a woman owning a whisky flask, but if it is yours, please let me know. And please come after the things."

It was signed simply "Mrs. France."

Lily leaned back in her chair and blew a long plume of cigaret smoke at the ceiling. . . . Both the flask and the cigaret case belonged to her. They had belonged to Staley Drummond and he had given them to her on one of their secret luncheon parties.

She remembered that his initials were on them, too, and that she had not smoked all of the cigarets in the case or touched any of the liquor in the flask.

She had seen them when he took them out of his pocket one day at the Park Lane restaurant, and had admired them. "The case is too small for a man's case," Staley had told her, and pushed them across the table to her. "Keep them both—I like to think that you have something of mine."

While she was thinking about him the telephone rang, and running to answer it, she found him waiting for her on the wire. It was a marvelous day for a drive, he said, and he was going to take the whole day off and get out into the country if a certain beautiful young lady would go with him. He had something to show her, he added. "Something I had made for you," he said, and Lily, always thrilled at the thought of getting some new piece of jewelry from him, fairly trilled as she answered that she would adore to spend the day in the country—which was certainly not her idea of the place to spend any time at all ever. She hated the country. Especially at this time of the year, when it was all mud and bare wet bushes.

"I hope you're not planning a picnic anywhere," she greeted Staley, when he came driving up to the house in his open car a half hour later, "because the ground is too wet and cold to sit on—or even to stand on while we boil steaks and make coffee and things." She knew that that was Staley's favorite form of picnic—the kind where he could cook a lot of food over a smoky fire.

"All right, we'll find a tavern, then, or something," he agreed, and as he leaned forward to start his motor he slipped a box into her hand. Within was the most beautiful sapphire and diamond bracelet she had ever seen.

"And you designed it, I know!" she cried, looking at him with eyes that shone like the jewels. "Oh, you darling!" Really, he was wonderful, she said to herself, slipping it over her gloved hand. He was always thinking of her. Always thinking of ways to spend money on her. . . . And the best of it was that he had so much of it to spend!

And so it happened that it was not until the next day that Lily remembered Mrs. France's note again.

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer — By John Held, Jr.

"My dear, I'm-all-of-a-QUIV-and-FLICKer! I mean I'm simply QUAking with QUALMS at this point, no less, because ARab's getting POSitively perVERted at this point! I mean I had a DATE to SKI with him the other day, my dear, and the entire TIME we were sort of VAGUEly tottering ROUND the HILLsides and things he was making a lot of POISonous incinerAtions about his BROTHer, my dear, which I think is SIMply FOUL because I mean I think there's NOTHing WORSE than being disLOYal to somebody in your own FAM'ly, my dear, and I think that practicably the WORST characterISTic ARab has is being JEALous, my dear, because he's ALways conSUMED with a JEALous IRE whenever ANYbody gives me a RUSH, and I mean of COURSE his BROTHer has been TERribly SWEET to me since he's been home and he HAS given me a teRRIFic RUSH and all, only he's NEVer gotten the least BIT PERsonal or anything. I mean I've never in my LIFE known a man so LONG who hadn't tried to NECK me, my dear, which is ONE reason why I'm AWfully sort of inTRIGUED by him because I think the WAY I apPEAL to him is MENtally, sort of, which I think is diVINE because I would HEAPS rather appeal to a man MENtally than PHYSically, my dear, because it's so MUCH more compliMENtary to your BRAIN, do you know what I mean? But ARab is SIMply TERrified at this point because he sort of FEELS he's ABsolutely been cut OUT by his BROTHer and I MUST say I think his BROTHer is HEAPS more INTeresting at this point, my dear—I mean I ACtually DO!"

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife" — By Adele Garrison

DICKY'S question concerning the identity of Mr. Jackson was a providential one. It helped me to cover the resentment which his disapproval of my overbalanced dinner list had given me.

His comment had betrayed that his disapproval was prompted by his fear of what Eleanor Lincoln would think of our entertainment, and the knowledge was not a particularly pleasant morsel for my mental digestion. But I took refuge in a voluble description of young Mr. Jackson. Disregarding the fact that Lillian, Marion and Mr. Veritzen might arrive at any moment, I told him of my first encounter with the young man with the wolfhound, of Eleanor Lincoln's queer behavior upon seeing him at the local station and of my belief, not only that she and the young man were old acquaintances, but that the dog, Fedor, was really her own pet which for some reason Mr. Jackson had pretended to possess.

Never have I had a more attentive listener. Dicky's eyes did not leave my face as I talked, and I saw that besides his natural interest in so bizarre a theory as mine, his brain was busy with some speculation of his own.

"What did you say the lad's full monicker was?"

"I didn't say," I returned, "but he calls himself 'George Logan Jackson.'"

Dicky snapped his fingers in derisive delight.

"Another hundred per center, eh?" he mocked.

"Your mother says," I quoted demurely, "that when somebody comes along calling himself 'Washington,' the gang will be complete."

"Gang!" he exclaimed. "What gang? What does she mean?"

I explained his mother's belief that the Lincolns and young Mr. Jackson were members of a gang of crooks who would not stop at murdering us if they so desired, and Dicky went off into another gale of laughter.

"The poor mater!" he said after a minute. "How she revels in melodrama. But describe this newest lad to me again."

He listened attentively while I went over the items of young Mr. Jackson's appearance, and I had the queer impression that he was jotting them down in his memory for future use. And his comment when I had finished sounded oddly cryptic to me, as if the information concerning the stranger had fitted in with other knowledge which he had.

"Well, you're certainly going to have the whole pack of cards from the ace to the deuce spot," he said. "When do you expect them?"

"The motor party ought to be here any minute," I said. "I told Miss Lincoln and Mr. Jackson that we would dine at 7, so naturally they will not arrive until just before that hour. As for Noel Veritzen, I do not believe he knows himself when he will get here. He's terribly upset about sitting at the same dinner table with his father."

Dicky grinned widely.

"I don't believe he'll need to worry over that little fact much," he said. "If I don't miss my guess, the lad's due for a little surprise in the behavior of his dear papa this evening."

Provokingly he offered no explanation of his prediction, nor did I ask any. But the next instant, without any warning save a widening of his eyes as he looked at me, he asked:

"Isn't that the necklace I brought you from that trip two years ago?"

Watch Your Kidneys!

You Can't Feel Well When Kidneys Act Sluggishly

YOUR kidneys! Do you realize what an important part they play in your health and length of life?

Your kidneys are the blood filters. When they act sluggishly, waste poisons remain and make one tired and drowsy, with often nagging backache and annoying headaches and dizzy spells. That the kidneys are not acting right is often shown by too frequent, scanty or burning excretions.

Assist the kidneys with Doan's Pills. Doan's, a stimulant diuretic, increase the secretion of the kidneys and thus aid in the elimination of waste impurities. Doan's are endorsed the country over. Ask your neighbor!

QUART OF WATER CLEANS KIDNEYS

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

Peach Signs For $50,000

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Ty Cobb, American League batting hero for more than two decades, will play for the Giants next season, according to the New York Daily Mirror today.

The Georgia Peach, the Daily Mirror story says, has secretly signed with John McGraw's club.

Cobb has attached his name to a one-year document and the salary he will receive will be $50,000, the Mirror has been told.

McGraw, the big-hearted Charlie Stoneham and his henchman, Jim Tierney, are said to be delaying this announcement so they can make it when the Giants reach Augusta next month. His signed contract is said to be now resting in the safe of the Giants' office on Forty-second street.

This contract, our informant tells us, was signed when Tierney went to Augusta to make the final arrangements for the Giants' training quarters.

Tierney, when asked if he had seen Cobb on that trip, entered a denial.

It is believed that Cobb has made no arrangements to take his proposed tour of the world because he has agreed to play with the Giants.

Cobb, it is said, first wanted $60,000 to play for the Giants. After several long distance telephone conversations between Stoneham, McGraw and Tierney the $50,000 figure was offered the brilliant outfielder and Cobb accepted.

The fact that the Giants had secured Cobb was one of the reasons why the Giants would not make a bid for Tris Speaker, the other veteran outfield star who recently signed with Connie Mack's Athletics.

In order that the story that he had signed would not break into print prematurely, Tierney is said to have asked Cobb to deny to his closest friends that he has signed

WAS the Stecher-Lewis wrestling match for the world's heavyweight championship at St. Louis Monday night one of those things, after all?

There was every reason in the world for the men to "level," but did they?

The manner in which the falls occurred smacked of the old circus stuff of the wrestling trust, with the first fall coming only after a long siege of grappling and the next two following in amazingly rapid succession after the crowd had been given a run for its money on the first one.

In this instance, Lewis won the first fall in 2 hours 16 seconds.

Then Stecher won the second in 1 minute 18 seconds and Lewis came back and took the third in 12 minutes 50 seconds.

It all may have been on the up

IS President Andrew M. Brown of the United States Soccer Football Association in full acord with the Olympic committee in the proposed selection of America's team by playing elimination games all over the country when the national amateur tourney is concluded?

That question flashed through the writer's mind at the conclusion of the big meeting here, when standing at the Union Depot the national executive asked about the Heidelberg team's nationality. When the writer answered the question by stating that Heidelberg was the only real American team in the country, the national prexy replied, "With the exception of the St.

Deming is a righthand batter and thrower and a speedy runner and his prospects of making the grade are considered bright. SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

THE most convincing demonstration of the worth of any particular pitcher to a ball club is the number of games he can win during the course of a season, and when the relative merits of Burleigh Grimes and Vic Aldridge are measured from that angle, additional evidence is found that the Pittsburgh club got the better of the recent trade with New York.

Burleigh Grimes.

Never since he broke into the main tent in 1922 has Aldridge won more than 16 games in a single season. He won 16 in 1922 and 1925, 15 in 1924, 1926 and 1927, and 10 in 1926.

THAT is only an ordinary record, on the whole. A hurler who cannot turn in more than 16 victories during a pennant campaign, while taking a regular turn on the mound, is by no means qualified for a classification among the real stars of the game.

Grimes, on the other hand, has beaten Aldridge's high mark of 16 no fewer than six times, and in three of those six seasons he captured more than 20 decisions.

Burleigh made his best record in

MANY SORE MUSCLES IN PIRATE CAMP

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

PASO ROBLES, Feb. 22.—Aching arms and legs abounded in the camp of the Pirates this morning when a score of pitchers and catchers arose to continue the spring training activities.

The initial work-out of yesterday was quite successful but it left the customary trail of soreness which is the part of every preparatory camp. Words of caution by pilots are generally wasted as soon as the fascinating baseball starts to fly.

The squad was increased by one player for today's program. Floyd (Pete) Scott, swift athlete obtained from the Cubs with Sparky Adams, in the swap that sent Kiki Cuyler to Chicago, arrived yesterday afternoon and today he will wear the spangles of the Steel City for the first time.

After an early glance at his revamped squad of pitchers, Manager Bush seemed pleased. Donie thinks he made a good swap when he landed Burleigh Grimes, who left the Giants to join the Buccos when Vic Aldridge changed from Pittsburgh to Metropolitan duds. Bush, Grimes and everybody connected with the Buccos thinks Grimes will win more games than Aldridge will, and in a general way be more helpful.

Lefthander Fred Fussell, late of Wichita Falls team, champions of the Texas League, received some attention from Bush. The little leader is anxiously seeking a southpaw who can win consistently and in Fussell Donie may have copped his man. Fred had an unusual year as his team won the flag and then he played a big part in the sweeping victory of Wichita Falls in the post-season series with New Orleans, champions of the Southern Association.

Today's session will be similar to the workout of yesterday, although it may be somewhat longer. Fearing some of the ambitious players might go a bit too far, Bush stopped the first work-out after it had

THE program has been complete for the boxing show in the Motor Square ring next Monday night.

Cuddy DeMarco meets Willie Harmon of New York in the 10-round main event, and Young Rudy and Harry Taylor will mix again in the eight-round semi-final.

Jackie Murray, Negro, of Center avenue and Jack Bany of McKeesport are signed for the second bout, and Johnny Riley of Homestead, who stopped Eddie Jiggers last Monday night, will engage Danny Stewart, Negro, of Wiley avenue in the opener.

Mickey Walker, middleweight champion, meets Jack Willis, hard-hitting cowpuncher from Texas, in a 10-round bout at San Francisco tonight. Mickey's title will not be at stake.

Four Willow Club amateur boxers will compete in the annual Middle States championship tournament at Gary, Ind., tomorrow, Friday and Saturday nights. Teams are entered from Chicago, Grand Rapids, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Gary, besides Pittsburgh. The locals generally go big in this event.

Ace Hudkins injured his left hand in defeating Sammy Baker last week and has canceled his match with Al Mello at Boston next Monday night.

IN THE TRAINING CAMPS

BOSTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Rogers Hornsby has taken over in an active way the proferred post of field captain of the Boston Braves. To cement matters the Rajah and Jack Slattery, new pilot, have become roommates at St. Petersburg, Fla.

Hornsby got in a little practice yesterday and announced that he felt great. "It will take me about 10 days to limber up," he said. He declined to regard his former teammates, the Giants, as his especial foes during the coming season in retaliation for the trade which sent him to Boston. "I'll be trying just as hard against another club in the league," he said. "It's my nature to do my best every time I go to bat."

PASO ROBLES, Feb. 22.—Pete Scott is a big booster for Sparky Adams, new Pirate second-sacker. Well, wait till you see him day in and day out like I have for the past couple of seasons.

Scott, by the way, does not relish the backstopping assignment. "I can catch in a pinch," said the erstwhile Bruin, "but I have devoted much of my time recently to the outfield and I believe that is where I belong now."

EVERY catcher knows the consistent squatting is not good for one's legs. And Pete is above

BOSTON, Feb. 22.—The Pittsburgh Pirates prepared to leave here today for New York where they will meet the New York Rangers tomorrow night after having failed to cut down the lead of the Bruins, American section pace setters in the National Hockey League race. The Bruins upset the onrushing Bucs last night 2-0, and evened the season series with the Pittsburghers. Each team has won once, lost once and tied twice.

The Pittsburghers, who had won seven out of nine games prior to last night's encounter, put up a game battle, but had its defense pierced in the first and final periods by the Boston attackers. The Pirates managed to smear all of the Boston sorties in the second period, but were unable to score themselves.

The first Boston score was goaled by Gordon after 45 seconds of play on a fluke shot. The puck had been driven against the boards when it took a crazy rebound, struck Gordon's stick and bounded into the goal for a score. Worters being

Perry Hi Scores Upset

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

ALLEGHENY HIGH SCHOOL is seriously considering tending a vote of thanks to the Perry High School quintet today, following Perry's sensational and unexpected triumph over South Hills High yesterday, which eliminated the Hillmen from further titular consideration in Section II of the City League.

Perry's victory clinched the divisional crown for Allegheny.

The North Side and South Hills fives had been tied for the section lead until Perry stepped into the picture yesterday and effectively erased South Hills' chances with a 26-25 defeat.

Perry had to come from behind to eke out the win. South Hills led 18-12 at half time, but Perry rallied strongly, and by scoring seven points to two in the last period, sewed up the game.

Allegheny made certain of remaining on top all the while by downing Carrick by a 51-17 score.

Its title series with Fifth Avenue will begin next Tuesday.

"MILE OF THE CENTURY"

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(Universal Service)—The "Mile of the Century" is the latest in sports. Dr. Otto Peltzer of Germany, Lloyd Hahn and Ray Conger are to meet in a three-man race in Madison Square Garden here February 29 as the feature of the K. of C. meet.

Star Teams To Aid Fund

AN EXHIBITION game between the Rosenblums of Cleveland and the Duquesne Lafayettes, County League champions, and the playing off of a tie between the Osceola and J. J. Verona clubs of the City League will be the main events at a basketball carnival to be held in the Duquesne University Gymnasium, March 3, at 7 o'clock.

The carnival is being held under the auspices of the clergymen's fund for miners' relief and the entire proceeds will go to the aid of destitute miners' families.

Other features on the program will include selections sung by the Monarch Quartet of Pittsburgh and a basketball game between two teams to be selected this week.

CRACK TEAMS TO MEET

The Rosenblum-Duquesne contest should be an exhibition of keen competition. The Rosenblums are one of the high standing teams of the country and were the professional champions of the country two years ago. Last year they were defeated by the Celtics for the championship of the American League.

The Osceola and Verona teams finished in a tie in the first half of the schedule this year and the game a week from Saturday will be the deciding contest.

The Monarch Quartet will be featured between the halves and between the basketball games. Its personnel includes some of the foremost singers in the Pittsburgh district, and is as follows:

Robertson Tilten, soloist at the Mt. Lebanon United Presbyterian Church, first tenor; Leon Churchon, well known in amateur theatricals, second tenor and manager; Ernest Raboch, soloist at the First Presbyterian Church at Crafton and an announcer at WCAE, baritone, and Temple Barr, solo cantor at Trinity Church, Pittsburgh basso cantante, Grace Blenko Martin is accompanist.

Tickets for the carnival are now on sale at 31 at the Joint Relief Administration headquarters in the old South School, corner of Ross and Diamond streets.

PITT-TECH

cocky beast that swept over Tech for one-sided victories on two previous occasions. This Panther was given one honey of a clawing around on Saturday, ere the fifteenth victory of the year was registered, by Notre Dame. The Panther is a bit sore today, all of which presages a tough night for Tech. But, as John Irwin will tell you, all nights are tough for Tech.

Pitt might stop and consider the fate of Duquesne's Dukes, who were barely able to eke out a 25-24 victory over Bethany last night here in a Conference game, all because they entered the game too confident and refused to take the Ilsons seriously. It was only a push-in goal by Jacques Rosenberg in the last minute of play that enabled the locals to come from behind and down the visitors from West Virginia.

MUST WATCH SKIBOS

If the Panthers go into this game with Tech tonight feeling that the game is "in" before it begins, it is just possible that John Irwin may have finally found the right combination, instilled into it a winning spirit, and unless the Panther is careful, this Tartan club may cut a notch or two in its tail. Stranger things have happened, such as filling an inside straight to beat three aces.

Unless Tech plays a lot better ball than it has exhibited in any of their five games here so far, and unless the Panthers are far below form, further below than they were for Notre Dame, Pitt will win hands down, or hands up, which ever way you wish to say it.

Coach Carlson tells me he is going to let the boys take things fairly easy, as long as they stay ahead. Pitt won't try to run up much of a score, at least it won't be much bigger than the last one was, the 59-29 affair on the Tech court two weeks past. The Panthers, using the regulars, will likely pile up their lead in the first half and then let the reserves battle it out with the Irwinites in the second period, while the others rest up for the game with Wash-Jeff here Saturday night.

MOUNTAINEERS NEXT

Tech also has a tough ball game later in the week, as the West Virginia Mountaineers, whose first invasion of this city resulted in their taking a drubbing from Pitt, will be here on Friday for a Big Four game. The West Virginians defeated Tech at Morgantown early in the season by a fairly decisive score.

Last night's Duke-Bethany game was a pippin—in the second half the Dukes passed their way to a 16-10 lead at half-time, and seemed certain to increase it in the second period, but after running their score to 21-17, the local defense and attack went to the puppies, while Bethany, with Rush and Hamill leading the attack, swept forward to pull even with and then pass the Dukes.

With four minutes to play, Bethany held a 24-21 lead. They kept possession of the ball beautifully, until Benedict broke through for a goal. With barely a minute to play, 37 seconds to be exact, Jock Rosenberg jumped the ball through the hoop in a lively scrimmage under the basket and turned an almost certain defeat into a pleasurable victory.

The Dukes, who defeated Nat Holman's City College of New York varsity Saturday, were off last night, especially in their passing. They were also a bit cocky, which is bad for any ball club.

Louis team."

This answer seemed to indicate that Mr. Brown as an ex-officio member of the Olympic committee had given the selection of America's team some thought.

It is true that St. Louis has a number of all-America teams, but outside of the professional element, which naturally is to be eliminated, the amateurs that compose the Municipal League are far from being in Heidelberg's class.

The Muny League, as it is called in the Mound City, is the training ground for the St. Louis Professional League, all of the talent in the professional loop being drawn from that circuit, but the players in that loop have not attained the finish desired to hold their own with the best amateur clubs in the country.

No club from the Mound City has ever made a showing in the national amateur competition, and it is plain to be seen that as combinations playing against outside competition the St. Louis teams suffer in comparison. There was considerable talk going the rounds in the early stages of the amateur cup last season that certain interests in St. Louis had handed together to create a team good enough to win the national cup, but if this was done, the team never appeared to advantage in the tourney.

HUGH BEDIENT REPORTED DYING OF TUBERCULOSIS

DENVER, Feb. 22.—Hugh Bedient, former star pitcher of the Boston Red Sox and a World War veteran, is seriously ill here. Suffering from tuberculosis, the former big league veteran, is reported too weak to stir from his bed. Bedient pitched for the Red Sox in 1912 and 1913, later going to the Toledo Club of the American Association.

WESSA INSTRUCTS LEADERS

The drive of the American Duckpin Congress for its first annual tournament, April 9 to 21, on the Haus Alleys, North Side, got under way yesterday with the appointment of committee chairmen by George B. Wessa, secretary. Photo shows Wessa instructing Hilary Wertz, chairman of the publicity committee, and Henry Recker, chairman of the entry committee, while Miss Margaret Nussbaum takes notes of the proceedings. More than 200 requests have been received for entries. Headquarters have been established at 923 Fulton Building, where entry blanks for the tournament may be procured.

progressed for one and one-half hours.

Until the arrival of the "ballplayers" next week the training activities will lack the usual spice. The infielders and outfielders must do their stuff before the picture is completed. Pitchers think they can hit and do a lot of other things but there are few pitchers who can emulate Pie Traynor, Glenn Wright, Sparky Adams, George Grantham, Joe Harris, Joe Cronin, the Waner brothers, Pooch Barnhart and the other members of the second squad. Bush will stick to the one work-out a day method of procedure until the second squad gets to camp.

When Capt. Pie and his mates land the plan will be changed to morning and afternoon sessions. In the event of good training weather the pitchers will be in fair to middling condition when the others begin to swing at the plate. The idea of sending the batterymen to camp in advance has the stamp of approval of many managers. If appears to work out well for Donnie Bush.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

1909, when he finished the season with 23 triumphs to his credit, or seven games more than Aldridge ever won in a year. In 1921 and 1924 the spitballer won 22 contests, in 1923 he bagged 21, in 1918 and 1927 he was victorious on 19 occasions, and in 1922 his total was 17.

DURING his 11 complete seasons in the majors, Grimes has won 177 games, showing that for the entire period he has averaged a fraction above 16 victories per year, or a better mark than Aldridge ever made for even a single season.

IS Willie Harmon going to keep up his work of depleting the supply of main-bout boxing material in the Pittsburgh district when he meets Cuddy DeMarco in the 10-round feature number of next Monday night's fistic program at Motor Square Garden?

Cuddy DeMarco

For more reasons than one, a boxing promoter always likes to have some boys of ability and prominence to shoot against any out-of-town bunk.

Not only does the patronage of the home lad's followers fatten the receipts at any particular show, but with a home product in the ring against a visitor there is a guarantee against the faking which two outsiders will sometimes put over on the fans of a strange town.

HARMON, whose proper name, by the way, is Herman Elsman, has been playing havoc with the Queensbury situation in Pittsburgh in that respect.

On November 28 last he came to town and in six rounds ended the immediate usefulness of Young Saylor as a main-bouter.

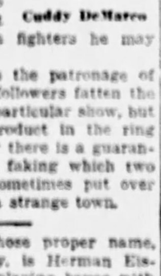
On December 12 Willie returned to Pittsburgh and killed off another home attraction in the person of Jack Zivic.

Now he is coming back to try to extinguish another local light by beating DeMarco.

HOWEVE, there is a happy chance that Willie may strike a snag this time, even though the dope may indicate the contrary.

DeMarco has given several unsatisfactory exhibitions here, at times has appeared to be hopelessly on the downgrade, and as Harmon has been doing a big comeback and has won six matches in a row, it would seem that the Jewish welterweight ought to hold quite an edge over the McKeesporter.

But it is on just such occasions as this that DeMarco sometimes shows his queer form reversals.



Miller Huggins.

He may look like a dead one against an opponent whom he has been picked to beat easily but when sent in to face a high-class foeman who seems to hold every advantage over him as judged by comparative form, he is apt to turn right around and fool the prophets by handing a lacing to his supposed superior.

So don't take it for granted that Cuddy is in line for a trimming Monday. He may show another flash of his old form and spill the dope again.

FIRST suspicions that Urban Shocker's announcement of his permanent retirement from baseball was only a new kind of holdout are strengthened by latest reports from Shocker's home city, St. Louis.

It develops that the business to which Shocker said he would stick this year instead of returning to baseball, is a radio store.

At this time of year, and as long as cold weather lasts, that game is normal, but when the warm months arrive there is a falling-off.

Even some of Shocker's friends admit holding the opinion that the pitcher would like to escape the spring trip with the Yankees and stick to his business for about six weeks more, and then join the Yanks when the demand for radio supplies is on its annual wane.

Manager Miller Huggins seemingly holds the same view of it, as he declares he is not worried in the least by Shocker's announcement and expects that hurler to be in line when the season opens.

If the Yanks get into the world series again, as looks probable, the 1928 season will be worth from $18,000 to $20,000 to Shocker, and it requires an extraordinary imagination to picture any modern ballplayer kicking that sum away.

WHEN Eddie Jacobs of Baltimore entered Pitt last fall, his reputation as lawn tennis player indicated that he would be a shining light for the local university in intercollegiate net circles and would spread the tennis fame of the Blue and Gold beyond all previous boundaries.

This is more probable than ever since Jacobs paid a short visit to his Baltimore home recently, for he gave new evidence of his class as a tennis player by a fine showing in an exhibition indoor doubles match in which one of the opposing pair was none other than the famous Bill Tilden.

Eddie Jacobs.

Jacobs and Frank Shields played against Tilden and Emmett Pare, and did so well that they got an even break, each side winning two of the four sets played.

Jacob's showing was all the more remarkable by reason of the fact that he had not had a racquet in his hands since last fall, there being no provision for indoor tennis at Pitt.

THIS is not the first time that Jacobs has played against a world tennis celebrity, as he once met Manual Alonso, the Spanish star, ranked at No. 4 by the United States association, and succeeded in winning one set out of three.

Eddie is ranked third among the junior players of America. He is a close friend of Arnold Silverman, Pitt graduate, who was singles champion of the local university in 1924.

Tennis is not the only sport in which Jacobs will be active at Pitt. He is now playing on the freshman basketball team and next winter probably will be a candidate for the varsity five.

taken by surprise and unable to make a move to block the disc.

In the second period, Worters had 26 stops to his credit to nine for Winkler, the Bruin goalie. This shows the power of the Boston attack.

In the final period, after two minutes and 12 seconds of action, Frederickson snapped the disc to Oliver after the pair had carried the puck down the ice and through the Pirate defense and the latter poked it past Worters for the second Boston goal. The game was a rough and tumble affair, being marred by a fist fight and several penalties, McCurry and Shore engaged in a battle in the first period. Both were served with major penalties.

After meeting the Rangers tomorrow night, the Pirates will return home for a contest Saturday on their own ice with the world champions.

If Cobb is signed, it looks as if Ed Roush will be traded. A few days ago the Daily Mirror announced that Roush and Zack Taylor would be traded before the 1928 campaign got started. Cobb will hold down center field at the Polo Grounds and, with Jimmy Welsh, George Harper and Frank O'Doul around.

the ordinary in speed; in fact, he is said to be the peer of many of the league's sprinters. So it is quite natural that he would wish to retain his zip.

IT MIGHT interest the League of Nations to know that Serbia and France work well together on the diamond. John Miljus and Remy Kremer are roommates in the Pirate training camp and they are like a couple of school boys in their regard for each other.

FRED FUSSELL, promising left-hander from Wichita Falls, gives a pretty fair reason for the success of his club. The champions of the Lone Star circuit followed through on their big season's work by trimming the New Orleans club, champions of the Southern Association, in four straight games.

"I do not wish to go on record on personal pitching achievements," observed Fussell, "but do you know that we had five pitchers on our club last season who won 98 games. That is an average of almost 20 for each pitcher. The whole five was ready for the inter-league scraps with New Orleans, but the series was over after four had pitched. So one of the five did not get to throw a ball."

SOCCO McCAREY is having a fine time. But when the "ballplayers" arrive next week, Socko's duties will be multiplied. It will then fall to the lot of the clubhouse boy to shag the foul balls that disappear over the fences. Boys are alike the country over, which is one way of stating that a lot of balls will not come back unless a watch is put on the youngsters who will be sure to gather around the ball orchard.

SPEAKING of SPORTS by HARRY KECK SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR and up, but the close adherence to the show schedule for falls causes one to wonder whether it was or wasn't.

SPEAKING of the rassling racket and its circus stuff, we are fast assimilating a new wrinkle in sports, that of ballyhooed amateur track and field events.

Have you noticed how Dr. Peltzer has been built up into a highly advertised gate attraction? Also Hahn. Also Ray Conger. There must be a big ballyhoo in connection with each major meet. Every time the big star loses he sets up a cry of "foul!" and the sucker public comes out to see a return race with the man who is said to have fouled him.

It's nothing but the old ballyhoo, and the A. A. U. authorities, who always are prating about their lofty ideals, ought to take a tumble to themselves and fire their high pressure press agents and cut it out. Either that or go into the business of promoting as professionals. The brass band tactics of the meet sponsors during this indoor season have been such to put Charley Fyle to shame—and that's just about the limit.

DOES Cuddy DeMarco fear Willie Harmon, the rugged welterweight of New York, whom he meets in the 10-round windup at Motor Square Garden next Monday night? Not so you'd notice it, although Harmon looked particularly impressive in his last two starts here, in which he knocked out Young Saylor for the first defeat of the latter's career, and won over Jack Zivic, and since then has whipped Hilario Martinez and Canada Lee decisively.

Cuddy came into the Motor Square office before the fights last Monday night and observed Johnny Ray, the matchmaker, reading some clippings of Harmon's fight with Martinez which were flattering to Willie.

"Let me read them," DeMarco asked.

"No, you can read them after the fight next week," Ray replied.

"Oh, come on," DeMarco coaxed. "I want to get scared."

DEMARCO is taking the Harmon bout very seriously because he realizes he can get a good break both here and in New York by beating Willie in the latter's present form. He has taken Tug Phillips and Young Rudy, his stablemates, to McKeesport with him and they will hit the road with him every morning and work out with him in the afternoon in the Motor Square gym. Rudy will meet Harry Taylor in the semi-final to Cuddy's bout and Tug boxes Pete Petrolle, brother of Billy, in the 10-round main bout at Erie Friday night.

NEW CASTLE is having a fistic revival with Bill Jolly acting as promoter. He features a card of six-round bouts each Monday night, and Ed Fritz, New Castle sports scribe and referee, reports that the battles are as good and as fast as those staged in the old four-round days in California. U. S. Carpenter and Mickey Dugan met in the windup last Monday with the judges splitting and the referee calling it a draw. Frankie Rio and Johnny Pollock, who fought a thrilling semi-final last Monday, have been rematched for the main bout next week, with Johnny Vivio of Bloomfield and Tony Casper being paired in one of the other numbers.

GEORGE BURNS of the Cleveland Indians tells a good story on himself.

After he made good as a big leaguer he met his old boss one day and the latter commented:

"If you had hustled as much for me as you do in baseball you would have made good as a plumber."

That must have been encouraging.

Giannini Great Immortal To Host of Admirers.

By B. C. FORBES

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—THIS Giannini story is going the rounds all over California:

Italian Admirer—Giannini he's the greatest man ever live.

Californian—Greater than Abraham Lincoln?

Italian Admirer—Yes, much greater.

Californian—Greater than George Washington?

Italian Admirer—Yes.

Californian—Greater than Napoleon?

Italian Admirer—Napoleon a great fighter—but Giannini he greater than Napoleon.

Californian—Well, would you call him greater than Jesus Christ Himself?

Italian Admirer—No—but Giannini he a young man yet.

THAT throws light on the hero A. P. Giannini has become. He is a hero to many besides these of Italian blood, for many have become rich through buying Bank of Italy and Bancitaly Corporation stock, the latter America's largest holding company for a tremendous list of bank and other high grade securities.

I happen to have known Giannini rather well for a number of years and wrote the story of his life in my book, "Men Who Are Making the West." His vigorous reaching out for branch banks in California first attracted attention. He met fierce opposition, first from other banking interests and later from state officials. Giannini gave warning to his political foes that if they insisted in blocking his perfectly legitimate path, he would oust them. They laughed.

But Giannini called upon all his co-workers, all his depositors, all his stockholders, all his friends to rally to his support. They did—so effectively that the Governor and bank commissioner were drummed out of office by the voters.

That convinced Californians that A. P. Giannini had become a power, he never shirks a fight.

HE told me years ago that he was not a millionaire and never wanted to be one. Last year his share of one company's profits was $1,500,000. Giannini promptly presented it to the University of California for agricultural research and kindred purposes.

That's another phase of Giannini. He is utterly unmercenary. He divides 40 per cent of the profits among his employes. By and by they promise to control the institution—the institutions, rather, for they have multiplied. Many of the employes are on the high road to wealth. They worship him.

When he takes over a bank—he had 289 branches at the end of last year—he seeks always to take over its officers, paying them generously and offering them profit-sharing positions.

BORN on the soil near San Jose, California, on May 6, 1870, fatherless at 7, later the stepson of a fruit and produce dealer on a small scale in San Francisco, the lad rose regular shortly after midnight and worked prodigiously on the wharves, yet stood invariably at the top of his school class. He won a partnership at 19, made the business the greatest of its kind on the coast, decided to retire at 21 with enough money to supply his modest wants.

Becoming a bank director, he didn't like the way banking was conducted, established a little bank of his own, October 17, 1904, laid down a cast-iron rule that nobody connected with it must speculate in any outside ventures or securities, decided that branches could be profitably opened or purchased in certain territories he knew well.

At the end of 1904 the Giannini bank resources totaled $295,437. At the end of 1927, $765,188,976. Depositors totaled 1,230,315.

AFTER the catastrophe of 1906 Giannini was the first banker to resume business—while the flames were still rampant. He loaded the bank's treasure on two wagons, grabbed plenty of deposit slips, etc.; sent a letter to all depositors telling of his new location at the home of his brother, had a man station himself at the dock to take in money from commission merchants; started to lend generously—and later received repayment of every dollar.

Giannini foresaw the terrible panic of 1907, laid in so much gold that he had to hire storage space, and when other banks stopped gold payments Giannini met all demands of his customers. This brought troops of new depositors.

Again, when the World War played havoc with finance, Giannini's bank didn't have to rediscount $1 of paper.

"BE the first in everything," is a Giannini motto. "Work does not wear me out; it buoys me up," he declared. "I thrive on obstacles, particularly obstacles raised by narrow-gauged competitors and their political friends. The main thing is to run your business absolutely straight."

That Giannini is running his business straight can be taken for granted. But whether he is not running it too fast and too far is a question only time can answer.

PUBLIC WORKS URGED DURING DULL TIMES

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith's impulse to speed up public work in New York to alleviate unemployment is based on sound economic judgment.

As a matter of fact, a distinguished banker, Waddill Catchings, of the House of Goldman, Sachs & Co., has just written a book urging similar governmental action in more systematic form as a cure for periodic business depressions.

Certain farseeing private corporations, like the American Radiator Company, have long perceived the wisdom of placing orders when general trade becomes slack. By so doing, the buyers get better service and better prices than at floodtides of prosperity, and help to check disintegrating forces which adversely affect all business enterprises.

Gov. Smith has asked department heads in New York to expedite all construction work now pending. This is sound public policy. It not only gives employment to men otherwise idle, serving a useful social function, but it also enables the state to proceed in a more advantageous market than it could at the top of a boom. The only criticism that can legitimately be made of the proposal is that it is in the nature of an emergency measure. A more civilized procedure would be for the Federal, state and municipal governments to project their programs of improvement and public expenditure far in advance, and use government activities consciously as a stabilizing influence on general business. Specifically, in so far as practical. The governments should make their purchases in slack times and stay out of the market when ordinary business is abnormally active.

Mr. Catchings, in collaboration with his literary partner, William T. Foster, economist, in a new work, "The Road to Plenty" suggests that a permanent commission be set up at Washington to advise governments and private industries when to speed up and when to hold off on permanent improvements.

"Our plan," the authors indicate, "calls for a separate Federal board, which shall itself gather and measure the data best adapted to show the adequacy of the flow of consumer income, using, however, for its own purposes, the wealth of data gathered by other agencies. Having thus collected the needed information, the board shall advise the government how to use it as a guide in all fiscal matters. The board itself, guided in the same way, shall determine when certain expenditures are to be made, which already have been provided for by Congress under a policy of long-range planning of public works. Thus the board, both through its own acts and its published reason for its acts, will provide private business with the needed leadership."

These financiers attributed temporary slumps and periods of unemployment, such as the one the public is now confronted with, to the fact that at certain times consumers collect insufficient income through wages, rent, dividends, and interest to buy the potential output of our factories. This insufficiency, the authors point out, result from the fact that part of the fruits of production are saved up, instead of spent. It may be retained as undivided profits by corporations, or hoarded by individuals.

Consumer income is adequate only if additional work apart from the making of immediately consumate goods is created through permanent improvements carried on either by governments or by private enterprise. The volume of such permanent improvements under way gives the key to prosperity or depression. If they come in too large volume, they flood the country with money, causing inflation; on the other hand, if they take place in too small a volume, they leave consumers with too little work and too little income.

Mr. Catchings, a member of a conservative Wall street house, in urging planned permanent improvements in accordance with a centralized policy, instead of the present haphazard schedule, presents what he calls a "revolutionary plan" for cutting down unemployment and poverty. The plea is for a more judicious use of saved up capital.

"The board," the authors explain, "should inform the President, Congress, and the various departments, from time to time, of the probable effect on economic welfare, in view of existing conditions, of taxes, tax rebates, refunding operations, payment of public debts, increase of wages and salaries, and other fiscal matters. Thus the board affords leadership to business."

The authors point out that the Federal Reserve System has been successful in making the financing of consumption more scientific; and suggest that the new board do as much for consumption.

The thesis is clearly an attempt to substitute collective leadership for the present anarchic rule of business, under which forces operate blindly and periodically tend to break down prosperity.

THE DIVORCE MILL

THREW MILK BOTTLES

Throwing milk bottles at her was one of her husband's favorite pastimes, Lillian C. Reese charged in her divorce action against Bernard M. Reese. The wife lives at 14 East Ohio street. She is represented by Attorney Louis Little.

HE KEPT HOUSE

His wife went visiting neighbors and left him to care for the children and on several occasions threatened his life, one time throwing a large knife at him, Bert F. Smith, of 27 Soffel street, Mt. Washington, stated in a bill of particulars filed in his divorce action against Catherine Smith, of Kathleen street, Mt. Washington. The wife also permitted dirty dishes to remain in the sink and left the beds go unmade for a week at a time, the husband charged. His wife so humiliated him in the neighborhood where he lived that he was compelled to move away, the husband stated.

STEEL OUTPUT SHOWS SLIGHT INCREASE

The Iron Age in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade on Thursday will say:

Steel production is holding its recent gains and is perhaps a shade higher than a week ago. In most districts output and shipping orders are virtually on a parity, so that mill backlogs have ceased to expand. Operating schedules of Steel Corporation plans are unchanged at about 90 per cent of capacity, but some of the independent mills, notably at Youngstown, have increased production. Operations in the Pittsburgh-Youngstown area now average fully 90 per cent, as compared with 75 per cent at the close of January.

Consumers are specifying liberally against contracts placed at prices below those now quoted. There continues to be some concern lest buyers take shipments in excess of consumption and carry stocks of material well into the second quarter. At Cleveland, however, pressure for prompt deliveries indicate that specifications are in close step with current needs, and that supplies are not being accumulated. At Chicago there is not only a good volume of specifications against past obligations, but also considerable fresh buying, sales during the week having been exceeded only twice since January 1. A further growth of mill backlogs there is reflected by extending deliveries.

From Chicago also comes the first signs of interest in second quarter requirements, particularly in sheets, contracts for which have been placed at prevailing prices. In other markets present mill quotations remain largely untested. Some of the motor car builders have tried to obtain concessions from the recently advanced price on automobile body sheets, and one large company, failing to get a better quotation on its second quarter requirements, bought for the month of April only. On the other hand, irregular prices on galvanized sheets for early shipment are reported from Cleveland and the south.

Automobile consumption of steel continues to increase, but at a gradual rate. Motor car manufacturers have taken heavy orders from dealers, but it will be some time before the extent of demand from car users will be disclosed.

Fresh demand for structural steel is large, but recent bookings were not well distributed, fabricators in some districts being short of sizable work while others with large contracts, notably in the Chicago district, lack small tonnages to round out their schedules. New inquires call for 44,000 tons. In addition three large buildings to be erected in New York, taking a total of 50,000 tons, will soon be in the market. At Pittsburgh, 16,000 tons of plates and shapes will be needed for 66 barges. Projects closed in the week totaled 20,000 tons.

Rail mills have enough tonnage booked to keep them engaged for several months. Railroad equipment buying has not developed to the extent that the steel trade had looked for. The week's principal orders were 2,000 box car bodies for Baltimore and Ohio and 1,000 flat cars for the Union Pacific. Bids have gone in on 2,000 refrigerator cars for the Pacific Fruit Express. Overproduction of oil is adversely affecting business in drill and drive pipe, but a fair tonnage of plates for storage tanks continue to be bought for southwestern field. An inquiry for 100,000 tons of pipe for a gas line from Amarillo, Tex., to Kansas City, Mo., is now before the mills.

Tin plate demand has been enlivened by inquiries for 100,000 box from a domestic oil producer and for 60,000 boxes from a Japanese oil company. Pig iron business is active in Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis and south, but is exceedingly quiet at Pittsburgh, in the valleys and in Eastern Pennsylvania. Steel mill grades of scrap are 50c a ton higher in Chicago on sales of 15,000 tons, but in general the scrap market has not reflected the recent increase in steel production.

Both of the Iron Age composite prices are unchanged this week, that for pig iron remaining for a second week at $17.75 a ton, and that for finished steel for a second week at 1.364c a lb. The finished steel composite is almost precisely the same as the 2.367c of one year ago, but pig iron is $1.21 below the $18.96 of a year ago.

MISSING CARMICHAELS STUDENT IS FOUND HERE

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Feb. 22.—Howard Grooms, 15, Carmichaels High School student, missing from his Cumberland township home since last Friday, has been located in Pittsburgh.

STEEL PRICES BOOSTED BY CARNEGIE

The Carnegie Steel Company, United States Steel Corporation subsidiary, has advanced prices on bars, shapes and plates $1 a ton, making the new minimum 1.90 cents, base Pittsburgh. This is the second advance in these products since the turn of the year, and marks the third raise of $1 a ton on bars since last November. The advance carries with it the usual differential of $2 a ton for small lots. The last previous advance on bars, shapes and plates was also $1 a ton and was put into effect January 19, while in November, bars alone were raised $1 a ton. It is expected that the leading independent steel producers will meet the advance immediately.

Action of the corporation in raising prices again is regarded as highly significant in steel circles, in that it reflects the confident attitude of the leading producer at a time when the business world was beginning to have doubts as to the maintenance of the higher operations of the industry as a whole. Some observers were of the opinion that present high activity was in a measurable degree due to the January price raise which was regarded as having the effect of driving in second-quarter business which might otherwise have been deferred. Whether the steel demand would continue beyond the point this "forced" business was a question puzzling most of the business interests and financial observers of the country.

Natural interpretation of the latest raise is that the steel makers feel able to maintain their new schedule, especially in view of the fact that it follows so quickly on the heels of the previous advance.

Stock Exchange, Banks Observe Holiday

Banks, stock exchanges and the principal commodity markets throughout the country are closed today in observance of Washington's Birthday. Business will be resumed in all markets at the usual hours tomorrow.

MELLON LAUDED AT BANKERS' PARLEY

Fifteen hundred bankers from all sections of Western Pennsylvania gathered at the William Penn Hotel last night for the thirty-second annual banquet of Group Eight, Pennsylvania Bankers Association. Officers were elected and Dr. Gus W. Dyer, professor of social science at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., spoke on economic fallacies.

An agricultural trophy, donated by the Exchange National Bank of Pittsburgh, was presented to the First National Bank of New Bethlehem, for its co-operation with farmers of that district.

Entertainment features were ringing by a male trio, composed of Edgar Sprague, Jack Thomas and Edgar Hicks, and by a mixed chorus of 12, and music by Nirella's orchestra.

The new officers elected are: President, D. Gregg McKee, of the Pittsburgh Trust Company; vice president, A. K. King, of the First National Bank of Wilkinsburg; secretary, Robert S. Brown, of the Exchange National Bank of Pittsburgh; treasurer, B. G. Bunn, of the First National Bank of Donora.

Members of the executive committee chosen are: E. S. Eggers, Union National Bank of Pittsburgh; G. E. Benson, Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh; Verner C. Boggs, Bank of Pittsburgh; D. C. W. Birmingham, Hazelwood Savings and Trust Company; J. Boyd McKown, Peoples Savings and Trust Company of Pittsburgh.

Dr. Dyer lauded the accomplishments of Andrew W. Mellon as secretary of the treasury, and said Pittsburgh should be proud of him. In his talk on "Economic Fallacies" he pointed out the numerous misconceptions most persons have of economic affairs.

Charles Milton Newcomb gave a humorous talk on "Psychology of Laughter." A. W. Robertson, president of the Philadelphia Company, was toastmaster, being introduced by James E. Fulton, of the Monongahela National Bank of Pittsburgh.

MR. FRISBY'S MOUTH NOW CLOSED INCIDENT

Congressman Sullen, Says "Pshaw" to Indolent Police

Sheriff Winshold, who has refused to loan his bloodhounds to trace Congressman Frisby's teeth. Winshold says he is afraid the bloodhounds might be snapped at and get hydrophobia.

By Congressman Frisby

WASHINGTON—If the police do not recover my false teeth within forty-eight hours, I shall say nothing further about the matter.

This is an ultimatum.

It is an outrage when a man of my standing can lose something very near and dear to him and not have the police find it.

As late as this morning I dropped into police headquarters and inquired at first one window and then another, "Has anyone found my teeth?" I asked politely. I refused to take no for an answer. Some of the policemen wouldn't even look up from their game of checkers. "Pshaw!" I cried, for I could no longer contain myself.

It is very trying for a person who is fond of solid foods to go day after day, week after week, without his teeth. I am sure that my teeth were stolen as I slept—probably in a picture show.

I suppose I could go buy another plate—but that isn't the idea. I was very fond of my other teeth—they were an heirloom in my wife's family, and had been worn by the Frisbys since the American Revolution. I want their return for sentimental as well as diaticiatory reasons.

ON "RETURNING EVERYTHING WITH THANKS"

ALL women like to see Themselves as YOUNG, and Receiving unstinted HOMAGE
From men, but only a FEW
Ever see themselves as OLD enough to RETURN it with thanks.
Women are LIKE that!
They will often ACCEPT love,
Homage, DEVOTION and great
Self-sacrifice, in fact,
Anything that INVOLVES the man
For years, quite CALMLY,
And yet, if a man
Wanted them to ACCEPT a
DIAMOND bracelet, or a
GIFT of some high-class
Bonds for the PLEASURE of
Their COMPANY for a very short
Time, they would be FUSSED,
Offended or FURIOUS.
True LOVE is life's greatest GIFT. If a woman does
NOT want a man's love
She should RETURN it. She Should either give him his OWN back, or some of hers in RETURN. Yes, a smart
Woman returns EVERYTHING,
Even a compliment.

BUGS BAER Says

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 20.

PALM BEACH! Never thought we would ever be playing a benefit for the poor children of Palm Beach.

But they have them down here. The benefit is to buy them new niblicks and spare tires.

Got into town this morning with Bill Collier, who seems to think the real idea of the benefit is for Collier and Baer to get some sunshine.

It's being run by the Kiwanis Club. Tickets are twenty-five dollars a throw. Sam Harris is the stage manager. Ned Wayburn has charge of the dancing and Ogden Goelet will play a banjo.

Joe Le Bang paid our carfare down here, but says I have got to make good or walk back. So it looks as if next week will see me going through South Carolina on a bicycle.

Arthur Hopkins and John Golden are showing me how to take a blow.

Gene Tunney is showing me how to get up from one.

But that's not the real reason I am on the stage. Collier tells me they put me on the bill so that Geraldine Farrar would have somebody to ignore.

Ted Lewis and Al Jolson are also on the bill.

Even at that I can't understand why people will pay twenty-five dollars a seat to see me.

I have a very difficult performance to accomplish. I asked Bill Collier what I did. He said:

"It's a fine part. You're a cooler."

I asked him what a cooler was. He told me.

"Well," said Bill, "after a motion picture machine runs fifty minutes it gets hot."

"What's that got to do with me?"

"Then you go on the stage until the machine cools off."

Mr. Collier got famous through being the father of Buster Collier, of Hollywood.

Special Bond Election Means Needless Expense

A bond issue on the initiative of Council is to come before the voters in the spring. Council is willing to have the matter come up at the regular primary, April 24, or at a later date, the same time the county bond issue is presented at the polls, provided the county commissioners are agreeable to an early date.

There appears to be no practical reason why both loans should not come before the people at the April primary. The polls will be open and the people will be on hand, ready to vote, so it seems that a special bond election would only be a matter of needless expense.

One county commissioner has expressed the opinjon that interest in the general primary might be such that slight attention would be paid to the loan. That objection scarcely would be applicable to thoughtful citizens. The other kind probably would not take the trouble to attend a special election, anyway, and their absence from the polls likely would offset their failure to vote on the improvement loans at the April primary.

Voters who regard their citizenship in such a light that they consider projects involving millions of much more importance than a hot campaign for office only can be trusted to look after their own interests sufficiently to give close attention to the loans as well as nominations for office.

Hospital Farms for Drug Addicts Would Save Many

While the misconduct of dope addicts is often criminal, it really denotes a disease for which the victim is only partly and sometimes not at all responsible.

There are 2,000 of such disease-urged criminals under commitment in Federal prisons, which are grossly overcrowded.

Imprisonment restrains them from committing further crimes. It does little or nothing to reclaim them.

Inasmuuch as the economic waste from narcotic addiction in the United States is conservatively estimated at a thousand million dollars a year, it is plain that the government of the United States should do whatever it reasonably can to check this waste by reclaiming the drug addicts over which it has control.

That is the reason for the sensible bill which Representative Stephen G. Porter has just introduced into the Congress. No man in public life is better informed on this subject of narcotics than he.

The Porter bill would establish under competent medical management two hospital farms in which dope addicts now in Federal prisons and other addicts committed by states or offering themselves voluntarily could receive the best known restorative attention.

The Public Health Service of the United States would have the advisory say in the selection and treatment of addicts. Inmates able to do useful work would be encouraged to carry part of the cost of their care.

Here is a constructive suggestion of high merit and very timely that deserves prompt adoption.

Beautify Mt. Washington For Its Practical Value

Plans of the City Planning Commission for the landscaping of the sheer hillside of Mt. Washington, along the route of the new boulevard is a step in line with the first plank of The Sun-Telegraph's platform—A Better, Cleaner, More Beautiful City.

It commends itself both as to utlilitarian and esthetic value. With the preservation of the existing growth of trees, which will be augmented by new decorative planting of trees and shrubbery, it is hoped to provide a soil anchorage which will prevent dangerous landslides.

The practical worth of that feature is made more important by the fact that greater beauty of the city's most prominent eminence, a cliff that is visible from nearly every point in the downtown district, is something that is bound to strike visitors favorably. As a scenic factor alone the Mt. Washington bluff is of immense value to the city.

The City Planning Commission's project covers three years of planting. It is to be hoped that it will be fully carried out.

Moving Old Arsenal Gate Means Monument to Past

A commendable movement is that of historical and patriotic societies to raise by popular subscription a fund for the preservation of the old Arsenal gateway. It is proposed to remove the gate from the Arsenal property across Butler street to Arsenal Park, where it will be preserved as a relic and a memorial of early Pittsburgh.

Serving as a United States Army post for many years, as a munitions depot from the early years of the last century until after the Civil War, during which it was the scene of one of the city's most tragic disasters, and as a supply depot during the World War, the old Arsenal was a factor in both national and local history.

The ancient gateway, suggestive of the portal of a medieval citadel, is interesting as an architectural relic as well as being a historical memorial of importance. Council has donated $2,500 toward the cost of removing the ancient entrance to a new site and about $7,000 more is hoped to be raised by Flag Day—June 14.

In its new location the old Arsenal gate will be an imposing monument to stirring days of the past.

1928 "CHERRY TREE" STORIES

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Spots on the Sun

THIS is likely to be the maximum year of the present series of sunspots. That is the opinion of Professor George H. Peters, of the United States Naval Observatory, who makes a daily photographic record of the appearance of the sun. Immensely large spots made their appearance of late, and their average number has been increasing for several years past. About the end of this year it is probable that a turn will take place and for half a dozen years to come the decrease in frequency and individual size will go on until for a time the face of the sun will be unspotted. Then the next minimum will occur.

The average period from maximum through minimum back to maximum is about eleven years, but the irregularities are large. The next minimum may occur about 1933 or 1934.

The sunspots have a great interest in themselves alone, without regard to their effect upon the earth, since they show so plainly the action of forces of terrific power periodically rending vast portions of the glaring solar surface. The most striking analogy that has been found for picturing their characteristic appearances is that of gigantic tornadoes whirling furiously in the layers of flaming gas that form the sun's visible shell.

But their cause, according to the best opinion at present, is something situated below the visible surface of the sun, or the photosphere. So far only as the periodicity of their occurrence is concerned, they have been likened to the eruptions of a geyser—but there is nothing resembling a geyser in their action, nor indeed in their appearance. The intention in suggesting an analogy to geyser action, is only to emphasize the idea that the causative force lies deep in the sun, and may be of such a nature that the individual spots can only be regarded as scattered manifestations of an internal disturbance affecting the whole body of the sun.

Sunspots are the centers of intense electro-magnetic action, and it is here that their importance with regard to life on our earth arises. It is believed that they shoot electrons, set free in the solar laboratory, which constitutes the sun, out into surrounding space, and these electrons, streaming like cathodic rays through the interplanetary void, arrive at the earth (if they chance to have been shot directly toward it) and produce in our skies the wonderful fluttering banners and streamers of the aurora borealis (Northern lights), as well as the violent electro-magnetic disturbances known as "magnetic storms."

It is difficult to understand how anybody can doubt that sunspots have an important relation to the earth's climatic and weather conditions. I have myself for more than forty years noted the evidences of such connection afforded by the remarkable coincidence of peculiar types of weather and the prevalence of particular kinds of violent storms, such as tornadoes, with the existence of maximum sunspot periods. The great difficulty in establishing a technically valid proof of such relation arises from the untractable nature of atmospheric phenomena, which are so subject to local influences that the general laws underlying them are largely obscured. The case resembles that of the tides.

If we depended only on the genral laws of tidal action to predict the movements of the sea waters in the different ports of the world we should find ourselves hopelessly at fault. A thousand causes of variation of conditions have to be considered and introduced into the calculations. In like manner, in order to abstract the influence upon earthly weather of disturbances occurring in the sun, a complicated field of cross-actions must be explored. But let no one doubt the human interest of sunspots.

Conscience Rebels

ISN'T selfishness robbing you of enjoyment you should have?

The desire to get more than that to which you are entitled makes you dissatisfied with many otherwise good bargains.

The desire to have or to gain more than those around you are in possession of, or are getting, makes you grasping.

You cannot view your own things with pleasure because you want to match up with something better that you have seen.

You are even unfair, because you don't care what the other fellow loses just so that you get what you want.

Everlastingly reaching for what you should not have has made you many enemies.

You have lost friendships and companionships that might have brought lots of joy and happiness into your life, because you are so grasping.

What real pleasure do you get from things that rightfully belong to another?

Some time your conscience will rebel.

The Rhyming Optimist
By ALINE MICHAELIS

Unsatisfied

ONE gains his long-sought goal; he scales
The heights of power and pride,
Yet soon the joy of triumph fails.
He goes, unsatisfied.

For only for a little time
Man's restlessness is stilled;
By siren voices' distant chime
His ear is ever thrilled.

He goes unsatisfied, and so
Throws off old tyrants' chains;
Unsatisfied, his swift feet go
Down pathways new and strange.

He ruled upon the land; the sea
He conquered, wave and tide;
Now like a bird, unfettered, free,
Goes man, unsatisfied.

Words of the Wise

The greatest vicissitude of things among men is the vicissitude of sects and religions.—Bacon.

Death presses heavily on that man who, being too well known to others, dies in ignorance of himself.—Seneca.

Prosperity can change man's nature; and seldom is anyone cautious enough to resist the effects of good fortune.—Rufus.

Attempt the end and never stand to doubt;
Nothing's so hard, but search will find it out.
—Herrick.

He that is proud eats himself; pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.—Shakespeare.

Tales that are Told

Knowing the Ropes

A WOMAN who had engaged a country girl as maid asked her if she could poach half-a-dozen eggs. The girl declared that she could.

"Very good," said her mistress; "let me see what you can do."

Shortly afterwards she had occasion to call the girl again; but to her astonishment she was not to be found in the house.

Presently she came tripping in with her hat on.

"Aa've got 'em all reet, mum," she said; "half-a-dozen beauties."

"Half-a-dozen beauties?" repeated her mistress. "What do you mean?"

"Eggs, mum," said the maid.

"But there are plenty of eggs in the house without buying more," remarked her mistress.

"Lor', mum, Aa didn't buy 'em! Ye telt me to poach 'em, and Aa did it fine. Why, bless ye," she added, by way of information, "my father and brothers have been at the game for years!"—London Tit-Bits.

Sold!

PAST stall after stall went the rich merchant, followed by a smart footman in livery, for the annual bazar was in full swing.

"Ah, Mr. Goldington," gushed a pretty girl at one of the stalls, "what are you going to buy? Auntie and I are in charge of this stall. We have cushions, pen-wipers, and all sorts of—"

"There's one thing I should like to buy," said the amorous visitor. "Do you sell kisses at your stall?"

"Oh, certainly," came the prompt reply. "A sovereign each!"

"Right!" said the merchant. "I'll take two, please."

"Auntie," cried the wily damsel, "forward please. Two kisses for this gentleman!"

For a moment the wealthy one was nonplussed, but only for a moment.

He turned to his footman.

"James," he said, coolly, "just take this purchase, please."

Turned Down

THE elders of a Scottish church approached their minister with the request that he would seriously consider the question of getting married, both in his own interest and the interests of the church.

He consented on condition that they would supply him with a list of eligible and suitable ladies in the congregation. This was duly done.

Calling on the first one, he began by way of introduction:

"I have been told, Miss Blank, that it is better for the church that I should get married. Would you consider such a proposition from me?"

"Certainly not!" replied Miss Blank, ushering him out indignantly.

"Oh, thank you," said the minister. "Then I can cross your name off the list."—London Tit-Bits.

Keeping Count

THE barber was very cheerful and chatty as he lathered his customer's chin.

"No, sir," he said, "I used to give credit, but I don't now. In fact, nobody asks for it now."

"How's that?" asked the customer.

"Well, sir, I once had a set of customers who used to ask me to chalk it up, but they kept me waiting so long that I got tired of keeping books and started a new system. Whenever I shaved one of them I put a little nick in his nose and kept tally that way. It was wonderful how soon they returned to the old plan of paying for each shave at the time."

The customer's voice trembled slightly as his lathered lips moved, and he said:

"Do you object to being paid in advance?"

Reserved

THE vicar had brought his youngest curate in to meet his daughter, and the little girl, not being at all shy, had planted herself on the curate's knee.

Discoursing with him the merits of her new doll which the vicar had given her on her fourth birthday, she suddenly slipped off his knee, announcing that she would bring the doll for him to see.

The young curate smiled and thanked her, and as she reached the door the child turned and remarked, to the consternation of everybody:

"Don't let anyone take my seat while I'm away, will you?"

New York Day by Day
O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The art of the motion picture along Broadway is facing the prospect of being submerged by its surrounding grandeur. It begins at the portals where glittering gentlemen caparisoned in gold-roped uniforms and wearing white gloves receive your tickets.

One enters the labyrinthine caverns of onyx and marble, treading on the rarest of Oriental rugs. There are grand circular stairways dotted with immobile flunkies in court uniforms, Byzantine nooks doming their splendor, round-shouldered vases, and statues cast in pure bronze.

There are ponderous chandeliers dripping crystal, the rise and fall of throbbing fountains, decorative walls in pictorial tapestries, balustrades with a Babylonian flair, and marine trained ushers to guide you to deep-cushioned chairs of plush.

Then there is the sensuous lull of lights emerging softly from an apricot haze to an incarnadine glow. Stop me, if I'm writing too fancy. Hidden organ consoles arise magically from the subterannean depths and the great cathedral-like halls are flooded with quivering and plaintive notes.

Following this come the stupendous symphony orchestras ranging from 75 to 150 members, arising, too, out of the elevator orchestra pits in extreme solemnity, to be taken by the swift rush to the dais of the conductor in full evening dress.

The best music of the old masters is offered and gorgeous curtains part often to reveal a cross-eyed Keystone cop spraying a bewhiskered gent with a garden hose or the launching of the battleship Colorado with a closeup of the governor's daughter. It seems like going through the palaces of Versailles to see a Punch and Judy show.

Thus have thousands confused the progress of the movie with the progress of the cinema temples. It does offer a bewildering hocus-pocus, but the fact is it is filling less ornate places devoted exclusively to movie presentation. There are some movie patrons left who actually want to see movies.

The wife of a prominent New York hotel keeper was walking along a shopping district when newsies appeared from everywhere crying war had been declared with Germany. She immediately went into a department store and ordered $50,000 worth of linen for her husband's inn. It was one of those impulses people call a "hunch." When she told her husband he was astounded. He did not have that much ready cash. He would cancel the order and was she crazy? She calmed him. In six months he was offered double the price for the linen. In a year the price was tripled. The net result was he had enough linens to last him during the duration of the war at pre-war prices, an enormous saving, and he was able to realize a sale profit from some of it of $50,000. And I see no reason for hiding the fact that the lady was Mrs. Frank Case, of the Algonquin.

One of the many excellent reasons Mayor Walker is considered so typically New Yorkish is he talks out of the side of his mouth. His diction is flawless and his English excellent, but somehow in his youth he picked up the custom so popular on the East Side—and never abandoned it.

The prize item of the week concerns a rich young New Yorker who returned from Hollywood hopelessly enamored. The lady is a golden blonde, and, naturally enough, of the films. His long distance phone bill for his first six days away from her was $312. On the seventh day when he called up, to his almost complete amazement, he was answered by her husband. He sent her a caustic and haughty telegram, as though that would get him anywhere. The laconic reply read: "I'm sorry I neglected to tell you. Things like that will slip one's mind in Hollywood."

In one of the smart hotels nightly there is a crusty and aged diner who comes tottering to the table carrying a large cut glass decanter of port. He puts it in full view on the table and parades out with it through the coffee room and up to his apartment. Just a don't-carish old dodo.

George Washington
By DR. FRANK CRANE

America is singularly fortunate in having for its greatest national figure and, in a way, its patron saint, such a man as George Washington.

Everything goes to show that he was a man of high principles and sterling personal character, such a man as is admirably adapted to set a mark for the emulation of the youth of future generations.

It is natural as he recedes in time and becomes a historic figure that he should attract to himself legends, and doubtless many stories that are told about him are legendary. But the character of these legends demonstrates the character of the man. He draws to himself stories that illustrate his high character.

A man may be the center of noble myths, just as he may be the focus about which gather ignoble myths. The tales told of Nero are Neronian and they may not be true, but they assimilate well with his character. So, the tales told about Washington are Washingtonian. You could not fasten a Neronian legend on such a character as George Washington.

So the stories told about Abraham Lincoln illustrate his human character, his largeness of heart and his other great qualities.

Neither have the revelations of modern times illustrating his human qualities detracted from Washington's fame. He evidently was a good liver and enjoyed the good things of life according to his times, but no mean or sordid story has ever been able to cling to him.

His fame rises clear and clean and the whole world does him honor. He was able to go through adversity with a strong heart and equally competent to endure prosperity with an equable mind.

Somehow we feel as though Gladstone's observation was true, that it is fitting that his monument should tower above all monuments, just as his character towers above the ordinary.

So long as men shall live or America shall endure will the fame of George Washington stand solid and secure.

LISTEN, WORLD!
By ELSIE ROBINSON.

Make Up Your Mind

DON'T be too good to your child.

Don't do too much for him. FEED HIS TUMMY, BUT KEEP YOUR HANDS OFF HIS BACKBONE.

Let him do his own thinking, even if that thinking throws a monkey wrench into your scheme of things. Let him make his own decisions, even though he risk disaster by so doing. HE'LL RISK A WORSE DISASTER IF HE DOESN'T MAKE 'EM!

How often you meet them—these people who have never learned to think for themselves. Nice people, honest, kind, generous people with the best of motives but just about as useful to society as a gob of jelly. All because they can't make up their own minds.

THE TRUTH IS, THEY HAVE NO MINDS TO MAKE UP. All their lives they have leaned on someone else's mind. Mamma's mind. Papa's mind. Husband's mind. Not infrequently, wife's mind! Someone else has always told them what to do. Someone else has always guided them through mazes, shielded them from mistakes. As a consequence, their minds have never developed. They are stunted, like the pitiful bandaged feet of Chinese women.

Psychologists call such minds "infantile." Baby minds in grown bodies. In his fine book "ABOUT OURSELVES," Prof. H. A. Overstreet tells of a woman with such a mind.

"I have in mind a certain woman who would not in any sense be considered a 'case' by a neurologist, but who undoubtedly suffers from a form of what might be called infantilism in normal life. She confesses that she never approaches a new task save with the impulse to postpone it.

"Somewhere in this woman's childhood there was a failure in education. An examination of her life reveals an oversolicitous mother. 'Helen, you must not go out without your "ubbers.' Helen, you had better be home by 6 o'clock.' 'Helen, I think you had better not wear that color. It is a little too violent.'

"At forty-five Helen still wants things decided for her. Being unmarried, she has no husband to take the responsibility. Hence she shirks. Every new task holds terrors.

"Normally, this woman is grown up; but when there is a situation to be faced, she suddenly slips back into the condition of childish timidity and irresolution. This case is typical of millions."

An infantile character like that is a nuisance in the home, but it may prove to be worse than a nuisance in the world. It may precipitate tragedies, even crimes—it may lie, cheat, betray, to escape the results of its own weakness. It may and often does become a tool in the hands of a vicious scoundrel.

Can infantilism be cured? It can. It can be cured at forty-five just as it can be cured at five. BY FACING LIFE.

TACKLE EACH PROBLEM AS IT PRESENTS ITSELF.

MAKE A DECISION, ONE WAY OR THE OTHER.

AND, HAVING MADE IT, STICK TO IT.
